Public Law Applications to Orders

Data Visualisation Tool

27 June 2019

Introduction

This PLATO tool is an update on the original version published in March 2018. The original was the first output of the Children in Family Justice Data Share (a matched dataset between family court data, Cafcass data and the Department for Education's National Pupil Database) and this enhanced version joins the original and the 'Who Are The Children?' (WATCH) tools. It builds on the existing overview of public law application and order patterns over time and across geographical areas, to add contextual information such as levels of deprivation, and presenting child population against public law demand, so each area can interpret their data against national trends

How to send us your feedback

We welcome any comments you have about the enhanced PLATO tool, including your views on how it can be improved.

All feedback will be used to inform our ongoing work programme to fully explore the potential of the Children in Family Justice Data Share.

Enquiries and feedback should be directed to the following e-mail address with "PLATO tool feedback" in the subject:
