DECISION

Decisions of the tribunal

- (1) The tribunal determines that the respondent shall refund the sum of £100.00 being the application fee to the leaseholders of 196a High Street.
- (2) The tribunal makes an order under section 20C of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 so that none of the landlord's costs of the tribunal proceedings may be passed to the lessees through any service charge.

The application

1. The applicants sought a determination of their liability to pay service charges in relation to major works carried out in 2017. There was no dispute that the works were required, the only dispute arose over the method of apportionment of costs between the residential leaseholders and commercial occupiers below.
2. The respondents invoiced the applicants for their proportion of the works costs, and these were paid on 13 October 2018, but at the same time the applicants said they disputed the actual amount being charged due to incorrect apportionment.
3. The applicants had carried out their own calculations of the properties and had arrived at a split of 53.55% to residential and 46.45% to commercial units. Their calculations were based on estate agents' data.
4. The applicants said that the method of apportionment of the total cost to the block, 2/3rd residential and 1/3rd commercial was not in accordance with the lease and said that this apportionment was based on the respondent's common practice in similar blocks; The applicants disagreed with this calculation because they considered it was more appropriate where blocks contained regularly sized units and not the 'asymmetrically sized shops below the flats.
5. Directions were issued by the tribunal on 31 January 2019 which set out how the matter should be progressed, and which included a requirement for the parties to provide bundles and documents on which they wished to rely, and which suggested the parties mediate the dispute.
6. The respondent arranged for the properties to be re-measured and actually arrived at a percentage of 53.36% (slightly lower than the applicants' figures) and from a summary of the final invoice, sent to the applicants under cover of a letter of 8 March 2019, applied this lower figure to reduce the relevant contributions. The respondents have also produced a copy of the measured plans, which are dated February 2019.

7. The applicants finally agreed the figures and the amended demands for service charge, leaving only the application fee in dispute.
8. It is the applicants' case that, if the respondents had measured the properties earlier when the protest was lodged in October 2018, there would have been no need for them to have applied to the tribunal. They also refer to costs following the event in that the 'loser' in court proceedings is often liable for any costs. The parties should be aware that the strict rules of cost shifting does not apply in these proceedings and it is not always the case that the 'loser' is liable for the fees paid.
9. The tribunal however considers that in these circumstances it would be reasonable for the respondents to refund the application fee to the leaseholders of 196a (who paid the fee) on the basis, that some months before the application was made, the applicants raised the queries over the method of apportionment and had the respondents not applied their 'usual custom apportionment' and considered the properties individually, then this dispute would not have arisen, and the applicants would not have had to pay the fees.
10. The tribunal also finds that the actual measurements of the properties should have already been known to the respondents for various service charge purposes, including for example insurance, and they should have been aware of the lease clauses in relation to the apportionment of any costs. Had they had this knowledge, the dispute would not have arisen, and the applicants would not have incurred the fees.

Rights of appeal

By rule 36(2) of the Tribunal Procedure (First-tier Tribunal) (Property Chamber) Rules 2013, the tribunal is required to notify the parties about any right of appeal they may have.

If a party wishes to appeal this decision to the Upper Tribunal (Lands Chamber), then a written application for permission must be made to the First-tier Tribunal at the regional office which has been dealing with the case.

The application for permission to appeal must arrive at the regional office within 28 days after the tribunal sends written reasons for the decision to the person making the application.

If the application is not made within the 28 day time limit, such application must include a request for an extension of time and the reason for not complying with the 28 day time limit; the tribunal will then look at such reason(s) and decide whether to allow the application for permission to appeal to proceed, despite not being within the time limit.

The application for permission to appeal must identify the decision of the tribunal to which it relates (i.e. give the date, the property and the case number), state the grounds of appeal and state the result the party making the application is seeking.

If the tribunal refuses to grant permission to appeal, a further application for permission may be made to the Upper Tribunal (Lands Chamber).
