

Withdrawn

This leaflet is withdrawn.

The Child Support Agency no longer exists.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

child support agency

Enforcement

What is this leaflet about?

This leaflet explains what action we take if non-resident parents don't pay child maintenance that is arranged through the CSA. It explains the powers we have in England and Wales, and the different powers we have in Scotland.

In this leaflet, we use some standard terms to talk about our services and the way we work. The glossary at the end explains them.

Important information about this leaflet

This leaflet is only a guide and does not cover every circumstance. We have done our best to make sure the leaflet is correct as of 12 April 2010, but it may not reflect changes to the law or our procedures after this date. You may wish to get independent advice before making financial decisions based on the leaflet.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

About us

The Child Support Agency (CSA) is the Government's child maintenance service. It is provided by the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission.

Our role is to make sure that parents who live apart from their children contribute towards their children's upkeep by paying child maintenance.

We use a standard process to work out how much child maintenance should be paid in each case, and to manage the payments. We can take legal action if the right amount of money is not paid at the right time.

To get help or more information, visit our website www.csa.gov.uk or call us on 0845 713 3133 or 0845 713 8924 (textphone). For details of call charges, opening times and our Welsh-language helpline, see page 23.

If you want to make a family-based arrangement, rather than one through the CSA, contact Child Maintenance Options for impartial information and support. Visit their website at www.cmoptions.org or call them on 0800 988 0988 or 0800 988 9888 (textphone).

Contents

What action can the CSA take if the non-resident parent doesn't pay child maintenance?	6
What changes to my circumstances must I tell the CSA about?	8
How does the CSA take money direct from the non-resident parent's earnings?	10
How does the CSA take money from a non-resident parent's bank or building society account?	11
How can the CSA take action through the courts?	12
What action can the CSA take if the non-resident parent lives in England or Wales?	14
What action can the CSA take if the non-resident parent lives in Scotland?	16
When could a non-resident parent lose their driving licence or be sent to prison?	19
How often does the CSA use these powers?	21
Can a non-resident parent get legal help and advice?	22
Where can I get more help and information?	23

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

What action can the CSA take if the non-resident parent doesn't pay child maintenance?

If a non-resident parent who has to pay child maintenance through us doesn't pay the right amount at the right time, we'll take action to get any money owed to the parent with care. This includes if you have arranged child maintenance through us and the non-resident parent is required to pay the parent with care directly.

We can:

- take money direct from a non-resident parent's earnings, if the non-resident parent is employed and is not already paying this way,
- take money direct from a non-resident parent's bank or building society account, or
- take action through the courts.

We can use more than one action at a time. The action we take will depend on the circumstances.

Taking action through the courts can be expensive and can result in the non-resident parent:

- paying their own legal costs and our legal costs, as well as the child maintenance they owe
- being forced to sell their home or other assets
- losing their driving licence for up to 2 years
- going to prison.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

If you are a non-resident parent and you know you are going to be late making a payment, you must tell us straight away.

If you miss a child maintenance payment, you can pay it by phone using a debit or credit card or by online banking. If you do, we won't take action against you.

We can take action as soon as we know the non-resident parent has failed to keep to the agreed payment arrangements, and has not responded to warnings we have given. We can also take court action if a non-resident parent avoids paying child maintenance by:

- failing to give us information when we ask for it, or
- giving us information they know is false.

What happens if the non-resident parent does not pay child maintenance on time in a family-based arrangement?

We cannot take action over non-payment in a family-based arrangement (known as a family arrangement in this leaflet). But the parent with care can contact us and ask to arrange their child maintenance through us instead of continuing with the family arrangement. We'll then follow our standard process for working out how much child maintenance should be and when payments should be made. If the non-resident parent does not pay on time and in full, we can then take action.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

What changes to my circumstances must I tell the CSA about?

If either parent's circumstances change, it can mean that we need to change the amount of maintenance that must be paid. So you should tell us if there is a change to any of the information you gave us to work out child maintenance, such as the amount of income the non-resident parent gets.

In particular, if you are a non-resident parent, you must tell us if:

- your address changes (you must tell us about this within 7 days from the date that your address changes)
- you pay child maintenance through a deduction from earnings order and you leave your job. You must tell us:
 - the name and address of your new employer (if any)
 - how much you expect to earn, and
 - your payroll number (if any).

If you are a parent with care, you must tell us if there is a change to:

- the number of children living with you that the non-resident parent must pay child maintenance for, or
- the number of nights a child regularly stays overnight with the non-resident parent.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

If you fail to give us the information we need, or you give us information that you know is false, we can take you to court and you could be fined up to £1,000. This applies to any person or organisation who, by law, must give us information – such as employers and accountants as well as parents.

Not all changes of circumstance will mean we need to change the amount of child maintenance that must be paid. We may not change the amount of child maintenance if the non-resident parent's regular net weekly income changes by less than 5%.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

How does the CSA take money direct from the non-resident parent's earnings?

If the non-resident parent works for an employer or receives an occupational pension, we can take child maintenance direct from their earnings or pension using a 'deduction from earnings order'. This is one of the main methods of payment that employed non-resident parents can choose. If they have not chosen to pay this way, it is normally the first step we take if a non-resident parent who is employed has missed payments and cannot give us a good reason why, or if they fail to agree a method of payment with us.

We'll tell the non-resident parent's employer how much to take from their earnings or pension. Their employer must take this amount and pass it to us on behalf of the non-resident parent.

If the employer fails to do this without a good reason, we can take them to court and they can be fined.

If the non-resident parent gets benefits, State Pension or a War Pension, we'll usually take the amount owed direct from their benefits or pension.

You can find out more about deduction from earnings orders and how they work in our leaflet How do I pay child maintenance? (CSL305). See the back page for details.

How does the CSA take money from a non-resident parent's bank or building society account?

We can take child maintenance direct from a non-resident parent's bank or building society account. We do not have to get the non-resident parent's agreement to do this and do not have to ask a court for permission.

We tell the non-resident parent's bank or building society to take money by sending them a deduction order. We can set up a deduction order to take regular payments or to take a one-off payment. The bank or building society can charge an administration fee for each deduction they make.

If we use a deduction order, we can also take further action if necessary.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

How can the CSA take action through the courts?

If child maintenance is arranged through us, we can take court action to claim any money a non-resident parent owes because they have not paid child maintenance or have underpaid.

Taking court action is expensive and a non-resident parent could end up:

- paying their legal costs and our legal costs, as well as the child maintenance they owe
- losing their driving licence for up to 2 years
- going to prison.

First, we apply for a liability order for the unpaid child maintenance. This shows that the law recognises the debt, and gives us the authority of the court to take action to get the money.

To get a liability order in England and Wales, we apply to the magistrates' court. In Scotland we apply to the sheriff court, which, if the non-resident parent does not object to our application, may grant the liability order without a hearing.

If a court does not grant a liability order, and we have good reasons, we can appeal against the decision.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

What happens after the courts grant the CSA a liability order?

We have several options, including taking further court action. The action we can take is set out on the following pages in no particular order. We can often take more than one action at a time. What we do will depend on whether the non-resident parent lives in England or Wales, or in Scotland.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

What action can the CSA take if the non-resident parent lives in England or Wales?

Bailiffs

Bailiffs can take possession of a non-resident parent's belongings and sell them to get the money owed. The bailiffs can also add their charges to the debt.

Register of Judgments, Orders and Fines

We can enter a liability order on the Register of Judgments, Orders and Fines. Credit reference agencies can use this register when setting someone's credit rating, which affects their ability to get finance, such as loans, mortgages and credit cards. It can also affect someone's membership if they want to join a professional organisation.

If a non-resident parent has their own business and their suppliers know the parent is on this register, the suppliers may change the way they ask the parent to pay for business supplies.

Third-party debt order

A county court can make a third-party debt order to tell an individual, or a business such as a bank, building society or the Post Office, to freeze money in an account in the non-resident parent's name on a given date. Once the money is frozen, the non-resident parent cannot use it without the court's permission. The county court can then order the individual or business to pay us the amount shown on the third-party debt order.

Charging order

We can apply to the county court to make a charging order. If the non-resident parent owns a house or land, we can register with the Land Registry that we have a charging order against the non-resident parent. We can also register a charging order if the non-resident parent owns other assets, such as stocks and shares or interest in a trust.

When the property or those assets are sold, any money left after paying any other orders or charges that have a priority (such as a mortgage) should be paid direct to us. Sometimes we may decide to apply to the county court for an order for sale. This forces the non-resident parent to sell the property or assets so we can get the money owed.

We can also apply for a charging order on a property that is jointly owned by the non-resident parent and someone else. But, when that property is sold, we'll collect the child maintenance from the non-resident parent's share of the sale money.

Order preventing avoidance

We can apply for an order preventing avoidance if we have evidence that a non-resident parent with arrears is:

- about to dispose of an asset, and
- is doing this to avoid paying child maintenance.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

We would apply to the High Court (in Scotland the Court of Session or the sheriff) for an order to stop the non-resident parent disposing of the asset.

Also, if we have evidence that the asset has already been disposed of to avoid child maintenance, we can apply for an order for the asset to be returned. The order would reverse the sale or transfer of the asset unless it had been bought in good faith.

What action can the CSA take if the non-resident parent lives in Scotland?

Charge for payment

Once we have a liability order, we can ask the courts to issue a demand for payment on our behalf. This gives the non-resident parent 14 days to pay, or 28 days if they are living temporarily outside the UK. If they don't pay, we take further legal action to get the money.

We will take the action we think will be most effective in each individual case. We can use more than one of our powers at a time.

Arrestment

An arrestment freezes money belonging to, or owed to, a non-resident parent on a given date. This includes stopping a non-resident parent being able to receive money they are owed or withdrawing the money frozen in their bank, building society or Post Office account. Once the money is frozen, we ask the non-resident parent to sign a letter that we issue to the individual or business, bank, building society or Post Office, telling them to pay us the amount that is owed on the liability order. If a non-resident parent does not do this, we'll ask the court to order them to pay us the money and any enforcement costs.

Attachment and auction

An 'attachment' is when sheriff officers list and value items that:

- belong to a non-resident parent
- are kept outside their home, and
- can be moved.

This may include cars or motorbikes, or the contents of a garage or outbuilding.

If a non-resident parent is self-employed, sheriff officers can carry out an 'attachment' at their place of business.

The non-resident parent must then not sell or get rid of any items on the list. The items can then be sold at a public auction to get the money the non-resident parent owes as child maintenance.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

If, through this process, we can't get enough money, we can apply for an 'exceptional attachment' and auction. Under an 'exceptional attachment', sheriff officers value and remove items that:

- belong to a non-resident parent
- are kept inside their home, and
- can be moved.

Inhibition

The amount on the liability order can be registered against the non-resident parent to stop them selling or transferring any 'heritable property' they own. This is known as 'inhibition'.

Heritable property includes houses, garages, business premises and land. This means the non-resident parent cannot sell or transfer the heritable property until they pay us the money.

When could a non-resident parent lose their driving licence or be sent to prison?

If the non-resident parent has refused to pay the child maintenance they owe, we can apply to the courts for:

- an order of disqualification – taking away their driving licence or preventing them getting a driving licence for up to 2 years,
- a warrant of commitment – sending them to prison for up to 6 weeks.

Even if the non-resident parent is disqualified from driving or goes to prison, they will still have to pay all the money they owe.

We only use these powers as a last resort.

What happens if a non-resident parent is disqualified from driving and then pays what they owe?

If the non-resident parent pays the full amount they owe, they or we can apply to the court for the order of disqualification to be cancelled. If this happens, the non-resident parent can apply to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) to have their driving licence returned.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

If the non-resident parent pays only part of the amount they owe, they or we can apply to the court for an order of disqualification to apply for a shorter period or for the order of disqualification to be cancelled.

If they still have not paid anything at the end of the order of disqualification, we can apply for another period of disqualification or for a prison sentence.

What happens if a non-resident parent is sent to prison and then pays what they owe?

If they pay the full amount they owe, they will be released straight away.

If they pay only part of the amount they owe, the prison sentence can be reduced.

However, we can continue to take other action to recover this debt.

If the non-resident parent builds up new debt (by not paying maintenance again), we can go back to the court and they can be disqualified from driving or sent to prison for each new debt.

What happens if a non-resident parent dies when they owe child maintenance?

If a non-resident parent dies and still owes child maintenance, we may be able to claim the amount owed from their estate.

We will always ask the parent with care before we do this.

How often does the CSA use these powers?

We use our powers every day to make sure non-resident parents pay the child maintenance they owe.

Between November 2008 and October 2009 in Great Britain:

- over 65,000 new deduction from earnings orders were sent to employers to take money from a non-resident parent's earnings or pension
- over 26,000 liability orders were granted, and
- over 800 non-resident parents received immediate or suspended prison sentences.

During the same period, our actions led to:

- over 100 county court judgement orders (Register of Judgements, Orders and Fines)
- over 2,000 third-party debt orders, and
- over 3,000 charging orders.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

Can a non-resident parent get legal help and advice?

Yes, you can get help and advice from a solicitor.

General advice may be free or, if you qualify, you may be able to get specific advice under the Community Legal Fund or other legal assistance schemes. A solicitor will be able to explain whether this applies to you. If you are not entitled to financial help, you may have to pay all the solicitor's costs.

An advice centre like citizens advice bureau or a local law centre can give you free advice. You can find a list of their addresses in the phone book, in the Thomson local directory, in Yellow Pages, or at the library.

Where can I get more help and information?

If you want to know more about child maintenance and how we work it out, visit our website at www.csa.gov.uk. You can download all our leaflets from there.

If you would like to talk to someone about your case, you should call the number on the top right-hand corner of your most recent letter from us. That number will be for the office handling your case.

If you do not yet have a case with us or cannot find a recent letter, you can contact our national helpline. The person taking your call will not have your personal information so won't be able to answer questions on your case. However, they can help you with anything general to do with child maintenance. They will also be able to give you the phone number of the office handling your case if you want to speak to someone who can answer specific questions.

You can call the national helpline on 0845 713 3133 from 8am to 8pm Monday to Friday and 9am to 5pm on Saturdays.

Please have your National Insurance number with you when you call.

We may record our phone calls to check our service and to train our employees.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

Textphone services

If you have speech or hearing difficulties, a textphone service is available on 0845 713 8924. Textphones are for people who find it hard to speak or hear clearly. If you do not have a textphone, some libraries or citizens advice bureaux may have one.

Textphones do not receive text messages from mobile phones.

Welsh-language helpline

If you want to speak to us in Welsh, you can ring our Welsh-language helpline on 0845 713 8091. The line is open from 9am to 5pm, Monday to Friday. There is also a Welsh-language textphone service on 0845 713 8099.

Other languages

If English is not your first language, you can use your own interpreter or one we provide.

Call charges

Calls to 0845 numbers from BT landlines should cost no more than 5p a minute with a 13p call set-up charge. You may have to pay more if you use another phone company or a mobile phone, or if you are calling from abroad. Calls from mobile phones can cost up to 40p a minute, so check the cost of calls with your service provider. Charges were correct as of the date of this leaflet.

Information in other formats

This leaflet is available in other languages, in Braille and on audio cassette. You can order information in these formats online or by contacting our national helpline.

We also have large-print versions of this leaflet available for you to download from our website, www.csa.gov.uk.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

Leaflets available from us

What is child maintenance and how does it affect me?

(Reference: CSL301) For all parents

How do I complain about the service I get from the Child Support Agency?

(Reference: CSL308) For all parents

How do I apply for child maintenance?

(Reference: CSL309) For children aged 12 and over in Scotland or their parents

How is child maintenance worked out?

(Reference: CSL303) For all parents

What happens if someone denies they are the parent of a child?

(Reference: CSL304) For all parents

How can I appeal against a child maintenance decision?

(Reference: CSL307) For all parents

My case is moving to the child maintenance scheme introduced in 2003 – what will change?

(Reference: CSL310) For any parent whose case is moving to the current scheme

How does the Child Support Agency use and store information?

(Reference: CSL311) For all parents

How do I pay child maintenance?

(Reference: CSL305) For non-resident parents

How will I receive child maintenance?

(Reference: CSL314) For parents with care

What action can the Child Support Agency take if parents don't pay?

(Reference: CSL306) For all parents

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

How a child maintenance case can progress

This diagram shows you how a child maintenance case can progress. This leaflet covers part of the process at the highlighted stage.

Information and guidance

CSA can provide information on how the process works, what parents will need to do and what might be an acceptable amount of maintenance in their case.

Application

A case officially begins when a parent applies to us to set up child maintenance payments.

If there is a change in either parent's life that could affect the amount of child maintenance that should be paid, we can review your case – so let us know.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

Gathering information and calculation

To work out the amount of child maintenance that should be paid, we need to gather important information. We ask both parents to provide certain information. When we have this, we will work out child maintenance.

Payment

The non-resident parent pays the agreed amount on the agreed dates and in the agreed way. This can be either direct to the parent with care, or to us. We then pass the payments on.

Enforcement

If the payments aren't made on time, we can take action.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

Glossary

Arrestment

An arrestment is an action we can apply for in Scotland. It freezes money belonging to, or owed to, a non-resident parent on a given date until they pay us the amount that is owed on the liability order for child maintenance.

Attachment and auction

Attachment and auction is an action we can apply for in Scotland. Sheriff officers list and value items that:

- belong to a non-resident parent
- are kept outside their home, and
- can be moved.

The items on the list can then be sold at a public auction to get the money the non-resident parent owes as child maintenance.

Charge for payment

A charge for payment is an action we can apply for in Scotland which gives the non-resident parent 14 days to pay the money they owe, or 28 days if they are living temporarily outside the UK. If they don't pay, we take further legal action to get the money.

Charging order

An order from a court in England and Wales that puts a 'charge' on someone's property, such as a house or a piece of land. The 'charge' is the amount of money owed. The court can also put a charge on any stocks, shares or other assets. This stops the owner selling the property, land or asset without paying what they owe.

Child

For child maintenance purposes, a child is anyone under 16 or someone between 16 and 20 who:

- is not, nor has ever been, married or in a civil partnership, and
- is in full-time non-advanced education.

However, if child benefit is still being received, someone under 20 can still be regarded as a child for child maintenance purposes even if they are not in full-time non-advanced education.

Child maintenance

Money paid by the non-resident parent to the parent with care to help pay for their child's everyday living costs.

What action can the CSA take if parents don't pay?

Deduction from earnings order

One of the ways we normally set up payments if the non-resident parent is employed. Under a deduction from earnings order, we ask the non-resident parent's employer to take child maintenance direct from the non-resident parent's earnings and send it to us.

We can also set up a deduction from earnings order if the non-resident parent is employed and they have not kept to other payment methods or have failed to agree a payment method.

Deduction order

This is how we take the child maintenance that the non-resident parent owes, direct from their bank or building society account. We can set up a deduction order to take regular payments or to take a one-off payment. We do not have to get the non-resident parent's agreement to do this and do not have to ask a court for permission. The bank or building society can charge an administration fee for each deduction they make.

Inhibition

An inhibition is a type of order we can use in Scotland to stop the non-resident selling or transferring any 'heritable property' they own until they pay the child maintenance they owe.

Liability order

A liability order legally recognises that there is a debt to be paid. It allows us to take further action to get the money owed. We must get a liability order before we can take any further court action.

Non-resident parent

The parent who the child does not normally live with.

Order preventing avoidance

An order made by the High Court (in Scotland the Court of Session or the sheriff) to stop a non-resident parent transferring or selling an asset to avoid paying child maintenance or to reverse such a transfer or sale.

Parent with care

The parent or carer who the child normally lives with and who therefore pays for most of the child's everyday living costs. In some cases this can be a grandparent, guardian or other family member – who is known as the 'person with care', rather than the parent with care.

Third-party debt order

An order the courts in England and Wales can issue against a third party, such as a bank or building society, to take money or other assets they hold that belong to the non-resident parent. We can apply for orders to prevent a non-resident parent withdrawing money from their bank or building society account. The money is paid to us from the account. A third-party debt order can also be sent to anyone who owes the non-resident parent money.

Information in CSA leaflets is also available in other languages, in large print, in Braille and on audio cassette.

You can get any of our leaflets:

- by phone on 0845 713 3133 (the line is open from 8am to 8pm Monday to Friday and 9am to 5pm on Saturdays)
- by textphone on 0845 713 8924, or
- from our website at www.csa.gov.uk.

Where textphone numbers are provided, these are for people who find it hard to speak or hear clearly. If you do not have a textphone, some libraries or citizens advice bureaux may have one. Textphones do not receive text messages from mobile phones.

CSL306

October 2012

© Crown copyright

ISBN: 978-1-84763-529-7

