Summary

This Note draws attention to UK Government guidance for companies and employers regarding management and mitigation of COVID-19 (coronavirus).

1. Introduction

- 1.1 Keeping shipping services running during the current COVID-19 outbreak will be vital to the fight against and recovery from the outbreak and seafarers have been identified as key workers. It is therefore crucial that robust protective measures are in place to minimise the risk to seafarers who are working to maintain essential supply chains and supporting services.
- 1.2 Employers and shipowners have a duty to ensure the health and safety of seafarers and other affected by their undertaking and to put in place measures to reduce risks so far as is reasonably practicable.
- 1.3 While social distancing is fundamentally a public health measure introduced to reduce the spread of infection, it is also relevant to controlling risks within the workplace.
- 1.4 Shipowners and employers should ensure that seafarers are able, where possible, to follow Public Health England guidelines on social distancing (including, where possible, maintaining a 2 metre distance from others) and hygiene (washing their hands with soap and water often for at least 20 seconds).

- 1.5 Where one or other of these measures is not practicable, other protective or mitigating measures should be taken to minimise the risk to seafarers.

2. Government Guidance

2.1 Links to relevant official UK Government guidance are appended in Annex A. This includes guidance on the availability of coronavirus testing for essential workers who are self-isolating.
