Introduction

1. The Competition and Markets Authority ('CMA') published its findings in the Retail Banking Market Investigation in a report under section 136 of the Enterprise Act 2002 (the 'Act') entitled Retail Banking Market Investigation: Final Report on 9 August 2016 (the 'Final Report').
2. The Final Report sets out the CMA's findings that there are features of the retail banking market in both Great Britain (GB) and Northern Ireland (NI) which alone and in combination give rise to adverse effects on competition ('AECs').
3. The CMA decided on an integrated package of measures to remedy, mitigate or prevent the AECs (and associated detriment) that it found. The Retail Banking Market Investigation Order 2017 dated 2 February 2017 (the 'Order'), alongside undertakings entered into by Bacs Payment Schemes Limited, gives effect to that package of remedies. It consists of:
 - (a) three cross-cutting foundation measures that will underpin increased competition in the reference markets which have the object of increasing customer engagement and making it easier for personal and business customers to compare the prices and service quality of different providers and of encouraging the development of new services;
 - (b) additional measures to make current account switching work better, including building on and improving the existing current account switch service;
 - (c) a set of measures aimed at PCA overdraft users, a group of customers who suffer particularly from the competition failures in the PCA market; and
 - (d) a set of measures targeted at the specific problems in SME banking, enhancing SME access to information through new comparison tools, requiring banks to offer an indicative price quote and eligibility indicator tool, requiring banks to agree and adopt a core set of standards for SMEs opening a BCA and additional published information thereby reducing the hold that incumbent banks have in the market for BCAs and SME loans

4. Terms defined in the Order have the same meaning in the Explanatory Note. In the event of a conflict between this Explanatory Note and any provision of the Order, the Order shall prevail.

Possible consequences of not complying with the Order

5. Section 167 of the Act places a duty on any person to whom the Order applies to comply with it. Any person who suffers loss or damage due to a breach of this duty may bring an action.
6. The CMA has the power under the Order to give directions, including directions to a person in their capacity as an office holder, for the purpose of carrying out, or ensuring compliance with, the Order.
7. Section 167 of the Act also provides that the CMA can seek to enforce the Order by civil proceedings for an injunction or for any other appropriate relief or remedy.

Review of the Order

8. The CMA has a duty under section 162 of the Act to keep under review the carrying out of the Order. This includes a duty to consider, from time to time, whether the Order should be varied or revoked in the light of a change of circumstances. Providers may apply for a variation or cancellation of all or part of the Order on the basis of a change of circumstances, or recommend that the CMA reviews the need for the Order or part of it.
9. In the Final Report, the CMA recommended that the FCA should:
 - (a) consider appropriate additional measures of service quality as well as the scope, methodology and publication of those measure set out in Part 3 of the Order (see paragraphs 13.115 and 13.155 of the Final Report);
 - (b) identify, research, test and, as appropriate, implement measures to increase customers' engagement with their overdraft usage and to assess the ongoing effectiveness of the MMC and consider whether measures could be taken to further enhance its effectiveness (see Figure 15.1 and Figure 15.2).
10. If, as a result of its work implementing these recommendations, the FCA introduces rules that render provisions of the Order unnecessary, the CMA could, subject to a review under section 162 of the Act, vary or remove part of the Order as relevant. The intention is for such a review to be conducted in advance of the FCA rules coming into force with any variation or removal timed to coincide with the coming into force of FCA rules. In doing so the CMA recognises the need to avoid unnecessary regulatory duplication.

11. Part 11 of the Order will cease to have effect five years after the Order is made, as set out in Article 8.

Structure of the Order

12. The Order is divided into 14 parts and has three Schedules:

- (a) Part 1 contains general provisions which include specifying when each Part of the Order comes into force, who it applies to and definitions that are used throughout the Order. These definitions are also used in this Explanatory Note.
- (b) Part 2 implements the open API standards and data sharing remedy (see Figure 13.1 of the Final Report). This includes the creation of the Implementation Entity and Implementation Trustee, the obligation to implement, maintain and make widely available API, data and security standards, and the information that will need to be made available through those standards.
- (c) Part 3 implements the service quality remedy (see Figure 13.2 of the Final Report). This includes the requirement to publish service quality indicators, provisions setting out how those indicators will be generated and how they are to be published.
- (d) Part 4 implements the prompts remedy (see Figure 13.3 of the Final Report). This includes a requirement for Providers to cooperate in the FCA's programme of research and to send prompts to SME customers that fall outside the FCA's remit.
- (e) Part 5 implements the remedy in the current account switching package not provided in the BACS undertakings (see Figure 14.5 of the Final Report). It includes the provision of transaction histories to customers at account closure and up to 5 years afterwards.
- (f) Part 6 implements the overdraft alert remedy (see Figure 15.1 of the Final Report). This includes requiring Providers to auto-enrol customers in alerts, collect customer mobile phone numbers, and specifies when alerts are to be sent and their content. It also has similar provisions to Part 4 about cooperating in the FCA's programme of research.
- (g) Part 7 implements the Monthly Maximum Charge remedy (see Figure 15.2 of the Final Report). This includes the requirement both to specify an MMC and to disclose it no less prominently than other information about Relevant Charges.

- (h) Part 8 and Part 9 implement the increased transparency of cost and eligibility of SME lending remedy (see Figure 16.1 of the Final Report). Part 8 includes the requirement to publish and display representative APRs for Unsecured Loans and EARs for standard tariff Business Overdrafts, the need to publish additional contextual information and make data available to intermediaries. Part 9 includes the requirement for larger banks to offer a tool on their website to enable SMEs to obtain an indicative price quote and indication of eligibility with access provided to at least two Finance Platforms and at least any two comparison tools (including the eventual winner or winners of the Open Up Challenge).
- (i) Part 10 implements the SME banking comparison tools remedy (see Figure 16.2 of the Final Report). This includes the Nesta prize funding arrangements, the provision of product specification and transaction data for the Open Up Challenge Data Sandbox process, the requirement to list on Finance Platforms and comparison tools including the 'Open Up Challenge' winner, the need for certain Providers to continue to fund the BBI and a safeguard remedy.
- (j) Part 11 implements the standardisation and simplification of BCA account opening remedy (see Figure 16.4). This includes the requirement for Providers to apply a Standard Information Set when opening a BCA account in defined circumstances and to establish a steering group to monitor implementation and agree changes.
- (k) Part 12 contains obligations on Providers to produce compliance reports and submit them to the CMA.
- (l) Part 13 contains provisions allowing the CMA to give directions as to compliance with the Order.
- (m) Part 14 relates to the provision of information to the CMA for the purposes of monitoring compliance with the Order and reviewing its operation.
- (n) Schedule 1: Implementation Trustee Functions.
- (o) Schedule 2: Communication of MMC.
- (p) Schedule 3: Share of contributions to the funding of the Open Up Challenge process.

13. This Explanatory Note follows the structure of the Order and contains four Schedules:

(a) Schedule 1: Open API standards and data sharing:

- (i) Part A – Agreed Arrangements
- (ii) Part B – Agreed Timetable and Project Plan
- (iii) Part C – Implementation Trustee

(b) Schedule 2: Presentation of service quality indicators

(c) Schedule 3: BCA Account Opening:

- (i) Part A – Standard Information Set
- (ii) Part B – Additional Questions
- (iii) Part C – Governance Arrangements

(d) Schedule 4: Indicative template compliance reporting form

Part 1 – General

14. Article 2 provides for different parts of the Order (and in some instances different articles) to come into force at different times.

15. The draft Order refers to ‘Providers’ throughout. Articles 3, 4 and 5 control who that refers to in each Part or Article. Article 3 provides a very wide application which is limited by the application of the de minimis exemptions in Article 4 and exceptions in Article 5.

16. The de minimis exemption for Part 3 is somewhat different and more complex than that which applies to other parts. This is due to the importance of maintaining stability in the participants in the service quality remedy. Brands not subject to this remedy will not be able to volunteer to be included in it. In part this is due to a concern about Brands with few PCAs or BCAs being able to generate sufficiently robust survey results. Even where a Brand has sufficient scale to participate in the remedy it will still take time to be included in the surveys and for customer data to be gathered. These concerns do not apply in so same way to rapidly expanding Brands or Brands that are well above the de minimis threshold following a divestiture. This has been reflected in the shorter period provided in Article 4.4.2.

17. The number of Active PCAs and Active BCAs for the purposes of the de minimis exemption will be based on the number of Active Accounts on 31 December which will be reported in compliance reports in the following year. In relation to service quality where a Brand is above the de minimis threshold set out in Article 4.1 by the 31 December 2016 (as recorded in the 2017 ANCR) it will be included in the remedy from the start.
18. For other remedies subject to a de minimis level, PCA and/or BCA providers not originally subject to the relevant part of the Order need to be above the relevant de minimis level at the end of two calendar years before the relevant parts of the Order will apply. This is intended to allow time for these account providers to take preparatory steps. By way of an example, if in June 2019 a provider exceeded the de minimis threshold and it was still exceeded by 31 December 2019, in February 2020 they would submit a compliance report stating they were above the threshold. Assuming the Provider remained above the threshold on the 31 December 2020, they would submit a second compliance report in February 2021 stating they were (again) above the threshold. The relevant part of the Order would then apply to that provider on 1 March 2021. Such a provider may, however, want to consider how to comply with the relevant part at least from June 2019.
19. Article 5 provides an exception to the application of the Order targeted at private banks and other providers of PCAs and/or BCAs where there are special circumstances. This was discussed in paragraph 12.14 of the Final Report. There is a simple mechanism of excluding from the remedy private banking divisions of groups subject to the remedy where PCAs are offered exclusively to customers with more than £250,000 of investable assets. The justification for excluding the application of PCA provisions for such customers does not apply to the extent that BCA products are provided by the same Brand or division.
20. Where a provider's investable asset threshold is lower (or there is no threshold), it is still open to providers to demonstrate to the CMA's satisfaction that PCAs or BCAs or both are provided to customers independently from the provision of such products to other customers and done so along some private banking or specialist banking service. This could include wealth management or investment services but does not necessarily need to include these. See Articles 5.2 to 5.4. As Part 8 does not include any de minimis threshold and applies regardless of the provision of BCAs (or PCAs), providers exempted from other provisions of the Order are not exempted from Part 8. In contrast the remedy set out in Parts 9 and 10, while not subject to a de minimis threshold in the Order, was limited to certain named providers having taken into account considerations of proportionality.

21. In making the determinations required by Article 5.2, the CMA will have regard to the list of attributes provided in Article 5.4. It is not necessary for each of these criteria to be met for the provision of PCAs to certain individuals to be considered operationally independent but they do need to be substantially met. There is also an exclusion where Brands or divisions are closed to new customers.
22. Provision is also made in Article 5 for entities or divisions of PCA or BCA providers subject to the Order to be excluded from the application of the Order where they are closed to new customers.

Applying for an exemption

23. To support an application for an exemption under Article 5.2, a provider should provide relevant information and supporting documents to the CMA, such as:
 - (a) details of the products offered by the relevant division or Brand, and the specialist or private banking services that are offered alongside them, including the terms and conditions and relevant eligibility criteria, together with details of whether and how these have changed over time and if they are likely to be changed;
 - (b) internal and external strategy documents and business plans relating to the division or Brand and its products;
 - (c) how its products are and will be advertised;
 - (d) details of the IT and other infrastructure, operational systems, policies, branch networks, physical assets, and staff, management and governance structures, which show to what extent the division or Brand is separate from the provider's other divisions or Brands;
 - (e) the proportion of accounts for which terms have been individually negotiated and/or receive relationship management services and/or which have materially higher overdraft limits than the provider's standard accounts (and an explanation of the basis for calculating those figures); and
 - (f) the number of active accounts for each product offered by the division or Brand in the last three years (and, if available, projected numbers of accounts in the coming years).

24. To support an application for an exemption under Article 5.5, a provider should provide relevant information and supporting documents to the CMA, such as:
- (a) details of when the division or Brand was closed to new customers and how the provider's business is now structured; and
 - (b) details of the IT and other infrastructure, operating systems, policies, branch networks, physical assets, staff and governance structures, which show to what extent the division or Brand is separate from the provider's other divisions or Brands.
25. Paragraphs 23 and 24 aim to give providers guidance as to the types of information and documents the CMA would normally wish to see. They do not represent a prescriptive list of information that must be provided in all applications. The CMA retains the discretion to request further information.

Derogations

26. Article 6 reflects paragraph 15.58 of the Final Report. This recognised that certain Providers did not currently offer any alerts and might take longer to implement Articles 23 to 25. Providers wishing to take advantage of this derogation may submit a request to the CMA in writing explaining why they think they should benefit from delayed implementation of these Articles and the proposed length of the delay (up to a maximum of six months). Such a request should be supported by evidence.
27. In order to substantiate an application for a derogation under Article 6, providers must submit any documentation they hold that they consider justifies the derogation. This may include:
- (a) Confirmation of current overdraft alert capacity;
 - (b) Internal strategy or project documents detailing how the PCA provider plans to implement overdraft limit capacity showing (a) why an extension is needed and (b) supporting the requested length of the requested extension;
 - (c) Internal project documents, including a project plan and timeline for implementation.

Part 2 – Open API standards and data sharing

28. Article 10.1 provides for the creation of the Implementation Entity, which will develop read-only open and common technical and product data standards (specified in Articles 12 and 13) and read and write, open and common banking standards for the secure sharing of transaction data (as specified in Article 14).

29. Part A of Schedule 1 to this Explanatory Note sets out the Agreed Arrangements. If any changes to the Agreed Arrangements (composition, governance, funding or budget) are approved by the CMA, the CMA will publish a notice setting these out. Such changes will either: require approval of the CMA having been proposed by the Implementation Trustee; or be made by the CMA following consultation. The CMA will consider these in the light of the Final Report. The same approach will be adopted in relation to the Agreed Timetable and Project Plan. Changes may be necessary to ensure that the Implementation Entity creates a solution which is viable in the long-term by allowing the Read/Write Data Standard to be capable of being extended to all products within the scope of the second Payment Services Directive's (PSD2) requirements on account servicing payment services providers to provide access to accounts.
30. Article 10 imposes an obligation on Providers to comply, not only with the Agreed Arrangements and the Agreed Timetable and Project Plan, but to use their best endeavours to ensure that the Implementation Entity does so. The use of a 'best endeavours' obligation, as set out in our Final Report, acknowledges that each individual Provider will not be in a position to ensure compliance but that, particularly when acting collectively, they will have a very significant impact on its activities. This requirement is consistent with, and intended to complement, the Implementation Trustee's role as chair of the Implementation Entity.
31. Articles 11.1 to 11.4 deal with the appointment and possible replacement of the Implementation Trustee. The Implementation Trustee has been selected and identified in Schedule 1 Part C of this Explanatory Note. The process envisaged for appointing a replacement Implementation Trustee is intended to be similar to that used to appoint the current Implementation Trustee. It will be important to have a replacement appointed with as little delay as possible. This may be reflected in any assistance required under Article 11.4 and is the reason for the limited period for Providers to appoint from the person or persons approved by the CMA.
32. The products and reference data identified in Article 12 are consistent with the Final Report. This is subject to any further information the Implementation Trustee considers necessary for the effectiveness of the remedy, in which case the Implementation Trustee will seek approval from the CMA to expand the scope of the product and reference data. The Order clarifies that only Unsecured Business Overdrafts are included within Article 12.4.2 and only Unsecured Loans up to £25,000 are included with Article 12.4.3. See explanatory notes on Part 8 for interaction with SME lending remedies.

33. In respect of Article 12.1.2(b), the only SME lending interest rates that must be made available when Article 12 comes into effect are those which Providers already publish as at that date. For Providers that do not publish rates for SME lending products, the requirement to publish rates under Article 12 should reflect the requirement to publish representative APRs and EARs in Part 8 and should only apply from the date on which providers are required to publish such representative rates under Part 8.
34. Article 13 provides for service quality indicators to be released through an API. It also provides for all anonymised underlying data generated from responses to survey questions (approved by the CMA in accordance with Article 16.1) to be made available by Providers subject to Part 2 in accordance with the Read-only Data Standard unless the information is already made public (in a manner consistent with the Read-only Data Standard) through other means (eg by the BBA or the research company or companies undertaking the surveys). This underlying data will likely be in database format to an agreed specification which preserves respondent anonymity. It is envisaged that data will be made available for each Brand subject to Part 3. Therefore while the obligation to release this data only applied to Providers subject to Part 2, the various databases released will include granular data for all Brands included in the surveys.
35. Article 14, which deals with the use of APIs for transaction data, is less detailed, reflecting the need for the Implementation Entity and Implementation Trustee to provide the detail of how this is to be achieved and exactly which products within the scope of the remedy it shall encompass. As set out in paragraph 38 below and paragraphs 15 to 18 of the Agreed Arrangements in Schedule 1 Part A, the Implementation Entity and Implementation Trustee will need to take into account the wider context of PSD2 implementation in taking forward this remedy.
36. Articles 12 to 14 all provide that information shall be 'made continuously available'. For clarification, the reference to 'continuously available' means that Providers are required to publish information on an ongoing basis from the date the relevant Article comes into force.
37. It has been suggested that the data to be made available in Articles 12, 13 and 14 should be subject to a 'Fair Usage Policy' to protect against intentional or unintentional data requests that threaten to disrupt Providers' systems or operations. We consider that, in so far as such a policy is warranted, it can be accommodated, by the Implementation Entity, within the Read-only Data Standard and Read/Write Data Standard.

38. As explained in the Final Report, we are not able to require Providers to share data about products which are outside of our Terms of Reference and for which we have not found an AEC that could be addressed by this remedy. We equally cannot impose an order on parties outside of our Terms of Reference and AEC findings. While the CMA has no legal powers in relation to products or providers that fall outside of this remedy, the CMA sees clear benefits to the effectiveness of this remedy if the Read/Write Data Standard is developed in such a way that it will assist the full range of payment accounts and payment services providers covered by PSD2 to comply with those obligations. In addition, we are conscious of the European Banking Authority's (EBA) role in setting regulatory technical standards and are aware of the draft Regulatory Technical Standards on Common and Secure Communication. Wherever possible, the CMA encourages parties to implement the Read/Write Standards in such a way as to facilitate the smooth implementation of PSD2. In seeking to achieve this, the Implementation Entity will need to give particular attention to the views of payment service providers subject to PSD2. We do not think that this alignment of standards should compromise the Agreed Timetable and Project Plan. It may, however, be necessary to proceed on the basis of draft EBA regulatory technical standards with flexibility to make adjustments to the Read/Write Data Standard once the EBA's regulatory technical standards are finalised.
39. It has been suggested to us that once the Read-only Data Standard and Read/Write Data Standard are adopted there may be merit in either (i) expanding the scope of the Implementation Entity or (ii) creating a new industry body, or working with an existing one, to oversee the structure and development of APIs. In either case we expect the FCA and the HM Treasury would play an important coordinating role. We are aware of work being carried out to consider these (and possibly other) approaches; this includes work arising from the Payment Strategy Forum's November 2016 report 'A Payment Strategy for the 21st Century'.¹ It is important for the Implementation Entity to remain engaged in these initiatives. Ultimately the CMA, while wishing to ensure the remedy remains effective, would welcome these bodies and the industry taking ownership of these issues and it may be appropriate at that stage to agree different arrangements (eg with different funding and governance structures) or it might be appropriate for the CMA to review whether parts of the Order should be amended or can be revoked because they have been superseded by longer-term arrangements.

Part 3 – Service quality

40. Article 15 imposes an obligation to publish service quality indicators on the basis of Brands and specifies what those indicators are. Article 16 sets out how the data underpinning the service quality indicators is to be collected. Article 17 (to be read alongside Schedule 2 to this Explanatory Note) specifies where and how the service quality indicators are to be published. Article 13 in Part 2 is also relevant to this remedy as it is the mechanism for the release of underlying granular details unless this information is made available by other means.
41. The service quality indicators set out in Article 15.1 and Article 15.2 are taken from paragraphs 13.106 and 13.107 of the Final Report. Other metrics have been proposed (eg telephone banking, splitting out branch and business centres, distinguishing between online and mobile banking) but we have decided not to depart from the Final Report. Further we consider that where there might be confusion as to what aspect of service quality is being measured this is best addressed through the design of the survey questionnaires.
42. Article 15 is intended to strike a balance between getting sufficient sample sizes, relying on survey responses that are up-to-date, and allowing time for the survey agency (or agencies) to process the results and Providers to prepare them for publication. The indicators based on the previous calendar year's results will be published on the first Working Day after 14 February each year. These will be updated on the first Working Day after 14 August with responses from the first half of that calendar year taking the place of responses from the first half of the previous calendar year. There will be a period of six weeks between the end of the collection period and publication. It is for Providers to agree with the appointed survey agency or agencies when, during this period, the results of the survey have been calculated and are to be provided.
43. To allow Providers more time between the submission of their proposal and the need to start collecting data, the first set of service quality indicators (to be published on 15 August 2018) need only be based on data collected during the nine months from October 2017 to June 2018. Each subsequent publication must be based on data collected over a 12 month period. The flexibility of collecting data for the first publication over a shorter period does not mean that it would be acceptable for those indicators to be based on a sample size smaller than that used for future indicators.

44. People who have not used certain services for a long time may not have an accurate view of the quality of service currently offered. We considered specifying a defined period in the Order within which survey respondents must have used the relevant service. This would exclude any responses in relation to a service that had not been used by that person in the past, for example, 12 weeks. We have not done so and instead propose that while there should be a defined period, the length of that period is best considered as part of the design of the survey methodology. The advantages of having responses based on recent experience may need to be balanced against the impact on sample size. We would, however, be very concerned about a survey methodology which accepted responses on services that had not been used in the past year.
45. A customer with access to a credit facility but who has not borrowed any money would not ordinarily be considered to have 'used' credit services. The customer would certainly seem less able to comment on its quality. If the Providers can demonstrate that it is possible to generate reliable information about the quality of credit services from those who have access to such services but have not borrowed any money within the defined period of time (see paragraph 44 above), then the CMA will be open to considering their inclusion.
46. A PCA customer should still be considered a user of an overdraft service when they do so solely in excess of a Pre-agreed credit limit. Equally we do not think that those in financial difficulty should be excluded from the survey. If there was compelling evidence that certain Providers were prejudiced by particularly high numbers of customers in financial difficulties and that regardless of provider such customers had a universally negative view of their PCA provider we could consider approving a methodology which excluded such customers. We think it unlikely that this will be the case.
47. Some Providers have suggested that the surveys should be restricted to sampling SMEs with turnover below £6.5 million. Doing so would, they argue, be consistent with other parts of the Order. Given the need to ensure sufficient sample size, we have concerns about excluding categories of SMEs and assume it is possible for the methodology to be appropriately weighted so that experiences of particular sizes of SMEs do not distort results. We consider, however, this to be a matter best addressed in the methodology to be proposed by the Providers.
48. We do not expect the proposed survey methodology to include surveying account holders under the age of 16. We do not accept, however, that the proposed survey methodology should exclude account holders aged 16 or over.

49. To allow this remedy to be in place within 18 months of the Order being made (as provided in the Final Report), the requirement to collect service quality information in Article 16 needs to come into force earlier. We are aware that work has already begun, led by the BBA, to develop detailed proposals for how the relevant data will be gathered. The CMA is keen to provide whatever assistance we can to help those subject to this remedy develop a proposal that is likely to be approved.
50. We would expect four independent robust surveys covering all Brands over the de minimis threshold. That is one for:
- (a) PCAs in GB;
 - (b) PCAs in NI;
 - (c) BCAs in GB; and
 - (d) BCAs in NI.

Each survey would need to ensure the contact sample is representative and that the sample sizes are robust. Some parties have suggested that we specify a minimum sample size. We do not think this is wise, as it could encourage adoption of sample sizes that are in fact insufficiently robust. Instead we expect Providers, working as part of the BBA process, to ensure that any proposal will include acceptable sample sizes. Face-to-face or telephone surveys are preferable, though consideration will be given to mixed methodology surveys. We have significant concerns about the use of online surveys but consider it would be premature to rule out their use at this stage particularly when combined with other methodologies. We would, however, have to be convinced their use was warranted and our concerns about them addressed before approving a survey methodology based upon them. Whether each proposed survey is new or built on an existing survey is a matter for the Providers to consider; in principle, the CMA has no objections to either.

51. The proposal approved by the CMA may, in time, require amendment. In such circumstances the Providers shall submit a subsequent proposal setting out proposed amendments. The CMA will consider whether to accept the amended version of the proposal in place of the originally approved proposal.
52. The preamble to the question of asking customers about their willingness to recommend the PCA/BCA Provider could ask the customer to think about (some of) the following:
- (a) the functioning of their current account;

- (b) recent interaction(s) with the Provider; and
- (c) the quality of staff and customer service in relation to their current account.

Doing so will help ensure that respondents are less likely to consider other factors (eg price, media coverage, etc) in their response. On relationship and account management, we would expect the survey question to ask about the care and attention (or similar terms) the SMEs receive from their Provider such that the question is applicable to all SMEs and is comparable across Providers.

53. Article 16.3 is intended to avoid a situation where the information that can be made available through APIs is limited by the survey agency claiming ownership over it. To provide meaningful granular data, we would expect the survey to collect at least the following statistics:

(a) in relation to PCA customers:

- (i) age;
- (ii) gender;
- (iii) working status and/or income band;
- (iv) use of overdraft; and
- (v) location (at least the first two letters of postcode in GB and first two letters and number in NI but more precise data is preferable if consistent with data protection considerations).

(b) in relation to BCA customers:

- (i) age of business;
- (ii) sector;
- (iii) size of business (turnover/number of staff);
- (iv) use of overdraft/SME lending; and
- (v) location (at least the first two letters of postcode in GB and first two letters and number in NI but more precise data is preferable if consistent with data protection considerations).

54. Article 16.4 reflects the discussion starting at paragraph 13.125 of the Final Report. We are concerned that customer lists may be necessary in order to generate sufficient sample size for smaller Brands. The extent to which Article 16.4 is required will depend on the sampling and data collection methods proposed by the Providers (insofar as they are approved by the CMA). The Information Commissioner's Office has highlighted the risk of sharing large amounts of personal data with the relevant research company or companies. It will be for the Providers to consider how best to achieve a fair survey using sufficiently large sample sizes in a way that is proportionate and does not raise unnecessary data protection risk.

55. As set out in paragraph 13.128 of the Final Report the funding of this remedy will be based on the market share of those Brands in the four markets surveyed (GB PCA, NI PCA, GB BCA, NI BCA). The intention is for the CMA to, in confidence, disclose to each Provider their share of the total cost of the survey. Any further disclosure would depend on whether the Providers contracted directly with the survey agencies or did so through a third party (for example the BBA).
56. Article 17 specifies where and how the service quality indicators are to be published. While the requirements of 17.1.1 and 17.1.2 could be met by a poster, they could also be met through digital displays which may or may not be interactive. We have decided not to specify in the Order any particular size for the display as its prominence may depend on where the information is placed. A display of a certain size on the door of the branch may be prominent while a similarly sized display behind the counter would not. Overall where the information is to be displayed in the branch we think it unlikely that anything less than A2 size for a poster, or a similarly prominent digital display would be considered Prominent.
57. As set out in the Article 17.1.3, for websites, including those optimised for mobile use, we require Providers to display the indicator set out in Article 15.1.1 on the main personal/business banking page of the relevant Brand's website. While this page may include information about products other than PCAs or BCAs, the possibility of customer confusion can be addressed by clear labelling what products the service quality indicators relate to. We expect the presentation of the indicator on websites to be consistent with that required for all indicators in branch (and which is set out in Schedule 3 to this Explanatory Note), though we are aware that this may not include all the explanatory text from Schedule 3. From this, other indicators set out in Article 15.1 should be set out no more than one click away from that page, and this page should include explanatory text as included in Schedule 3 to this Explanatory Note.
58. We also require Providers to include service quality indicators in their mobile banking applications. We accept that the layout of mobile applications will differ between Providers. Providers may choose to display the relevant indicators within the mobile application or provide a prominent link to where these can be found on the Provider's mobile optimised website. We expect the presentation of the indicator in mobile applications to be consistent with that required for all indicators in branch (and which is set out in Schedule 3 to this Explanatory Note).

59. The Final Report specified that the service quality indicators are to be published in leaflets likely to be seen by prospective customers. In response to Providers' concerns about reprinting such leaflets every six months, we have provided in Article 17.1.4 that the indicators may be published as inserts to the leaflet. Again compliance with this may be monitored through mystery shopping and possibly the receipt of complaints.
60. It has been suggested to us that we should require the service quality indicators to be included in e-mails and by telephone. This was not included in the Final Report and while we are open to Providers using these channels to communicate the service quality indicators, we do not think this should be part of the Order.
61. We have conducted market research on various ways in which the service quality indicators are to be presented. This was published on 14 October 2016 and is available on our website.² We have also published further market research on a more developed draft of the proposed presentation. This indicated a clear preference for displaying not simply the score of customers Brand alongside their rank but also the identity of the top five Brands (and their score) for each of the indicators. This high level requirement is in the Order itself while more details of the specification of the presentation is provided in Schedule 2 to this Explanatory Note. Article 17.4 of the Order sets out the mechanism for the CMA to amend this, and the CMA may do so in advance of the requirement to publish service quality indicators comes into force.
62. Article 17.2.1(c) and Article 17.2.2(c) both clarify that there may be joint rankings. Only Providers with the same (whole) percentage score will share joint rankings. Where one Provider has a higher score than another they will be given a higher ranking.

Part 4 – Prompts

63. Article 18 supports the work that the FCA has proposed to undertake following the CMA's recommendation that they undertake a research programme to identify those prompts most likely to increase customer awareness of the potential benefits of switching and prompt customers to consider their banking arrangements. The outcome of this research programme will inform how the FCA responds to one of the CMA's other recommendation: that the FCA use its rule-making powers to implement a series of prompts to be communicated to PCA and BCA customers. The FCA published its response to the recommendations contained in the CMA's Final Report on 3rd November 2016³ (see in particular paragraphs 4.28 to 4.45) (the 'FCA's Response').
64. As set out in paragraph 4.43 of the FCA's Response, firms who want to work with the FCA on the prompts research programme have been invited to express an interest in doing so. Once Article 18 comes into force, the FCA will be able to notify any Provider subject to Part 4 that they are a Selected Prompts Providers and therefore subject to the obligations set out in Article 18.2.
65. The timeframe for the Prompts Research Programme is a matter for the FCA. In the FCA's Response, they have indicated that they expect to take research and testing on prompts forward through the course of 2017. We are aware of concerns about customers' ability to opt-out of receiving prompts and the impact on other communication sent by banks to customers in the treatment sample. The CMA expects such concerns to be addressed as part of the design of the Prompts Research Programme by the FCA. The reference to 'related purposes' is to be narrowly interpreted and is intended to address circumstances where the FCA might reasonably conclude that the purpose of the action was within the Prompts Research Programme but there was some uncertainty.
66. Article 19 addresses the situation where, following the Prompts Research Programme and consultation, the FCA makes rules requiring prompts to be issued. If the scope of the FCA's rules do not extend to all SMEs (for example, the FCA's Banking Conduct of Business Sourcebook extends only to micro-enterprises, but not to all SMEs), Article 19 provides that providers will also be required to send equivalent prompts in relation to BCAs held by larger SMEs. This requirement does not, however, apply in relation to BCAs held by SMEs with annual sales revenue (exclusive of VAT and other turnover-related takes) of more than £6.5 million even though they are within the Retail Banking Market Investigation terms of reference. The CMA will also retain discretion not to require a provider to send such prompts. This discretion is expected to be exercised sparingly and only where the effect of complying with the Order would be unreasonable, ineffective or disproportionate. The basis for this provision is provided in paragraph 13.206 of the Final Report.

Part 5 – Transaction History

67. Article 20 implements the remedy summarised in the first bullet point of Figure 14.5 of the Final Report. This specifies that transaction histories should be provided at the time of account closure, unless the customer decides to opt out. A number of parties have suggested that the Order should, instead, adopt an opt-in mechanism. Doing so would, however, be inconsistent with the Final Report and the reasoning set out there. Providers are given considerable flexibility in how they implement this remedy: the information may be provided electronically including through APIs and by giving customers access to a portal from which their transaction history can be downloaded. While Providers implementing this remedy electronically may in addition decide to offer customers the choice of being provided their transaction history on paper, this additional provision is not mandated by the Order and therefore may be based on opt-in consent.
68. Article 20 provides for Payment Transaction Histories to be provided at account rather than customer level. Where a customer has changed their account type but their account number has remained the same (eg a move from a youth accounts to a standard account) information to cover both products should be provided. Where a customer changes their account so that they have a different account information needs only be provided in respect of the account being closed rather than in respect of previous accounts with different account numbers held within the past 5 years. Where a customer has moved from one account to another with the same Provider, or has switched to a new Provider, Article 20 will not apply so long as customers retain online access to the Payment Transaction History from their old account or have had the information transferred to them or to their new Provider after the relevant account is closed (for example as a result of any future enhancements to CASS or another other industry development). In respect of joint accounts, as the information is to be provided at an account level:

- (a) it needs to be provided only once in respect of joint accounts, Providers not offering the information to both account holders will need to consider how best to manage this; and
 - (b) Article 20 does not apply where only one of the account holders leaves the account, but the account remains open for the benefit of the other account holder(s).
- 69. Some Providers have raised concerns about how this interacts with the CASS switching process. While in the Final Report the CMA decided not to mandate any changes to the CASS process. Insofar as a change might assist Providers to comply with this requirement this is a matter for those Providers to work with BACS to implement. Ultimately it is for Providers to consider how best they communicate with customers closing their accounts.
- 70. Article 20 specifies certain information does not need to be provided. The most notable example of this is in relation to transactions that occurred more than five years before the date of closure. Customers should be able to request shorter periods (eg transactions over the past two years) but the Order does not require provision of information for more than a single continuous period.
- 71. Some Providers have highlighted the difficulty of transferring payment transaction data electronically and securely to customers who have not already signed up to the Provider's online banking service without first conducting security checks. In this context, Articles 20.6, 20.7 and 20.8 are intended to permit Providers to meet the requirements of Article 20.1 by writing to customers who do not fall under Article 20.3.1 (in particular, customers without existing digital access to the account they are closing) to notify them of how to download this information. In this context, the time limit for providing the customer access to the data will start to run from the time the customer has complied with the Provider's reasonable identification requirements. Providers may also wish to use this written notice to inform the customer of their right to obtain historic transaction history under Article 21.
- 72. Article 21 is intended to align with rights of access to personal data provided in Section 7 of the DPA. The Article does not require Providers to supply Payment Transaction History information that is more than five years old. A customer requesting their Payment Transaction History three years after they closed their account would be entitled to only the last two years of transaction information under the Order.
- 73. The requirement under Article 21 can be met by a Provider making available for collection the requested Payment Transaction History in branch.

74. While it might be assumed that the information to be provided under the Part would be in the same format as the account statements provided at the time, this is not a specific requirement.
75. Some Providers suggested that this requirement is subject to a 'sunset clause' once Part 2 of the Order is brought fully into force. While use of APIs may be an effective means for Providers to implement this remedy it is not clear at this stage whether it will render Part 5 unnecessary for all those subject to it. This, obviously, does not preclude the use of the remedy review process provided in section 162 of the Act if warranted at the relevant time.

Part 6 – Automatic enrolment into a programme of alerts

76. The heading of this Part of the Order has been amended from the heading given in the Final Report ('Unarranged Overdraft Alerts') to clarify that it applies not simply to 'unarranged overdrafts' assuming the EBA adopts the FCA's proposed definition in the context of the Payment Accounts Directive. Instead, as set out in the Final Report, this Part of the Order is intended to apply where there is an attempt to exceed a 'Pre-agreed credit limit'. This is defined in Part 1 and includes circumstances where an arranged overdraft (defined in accordance with the FCA's proposal to the EBA) is exceeded but customers are offered a second tier or some other form of additional arranged overdraft. This may, for example be, where a daily charge of 50p becomes a daily charge of £5 after a set limit which varies from customer to customer. It is not intended to capture a stepped increase in rates or charges due to increased borrowing that is applied at the same level for all overdraft users. An example of this would be an increase in daily charges from 75p to £1 when customers borrow over £1000 and increase again to £2 when customers borrow over £2,500. Equally it is not intended to apply in circumstances where there is no charge for exceeding (or attempting to exceed) a Pre-agreed credit limit. A similar approach is adopted in Part 7 in respect of MMCs.
77. Article 23 provides for the enrolment of new and existing customers in the Programme of Alerts. Article 24 sets out the circumstances in which Alerts are to be sent. Article 25 specifies the content of Alerts. Article 26 imposes certain obligations on Providers to collect mobile numbers to ensure that the automatic enrolment is effective. Finally, Article 27 provides a requirement on Providers to cooperate in the FCA alerts research in terms similar to those of Article 18.
78. Part 6 is necessarily set at an account rather than customer level: multiple account holders would (subject to Article 23.2) have each of their accounts enrolled. Where an account is held jointly the obligation in Article 23.1 applies to each customer. The extent to which one joint customer can opt-out of the Programme of Alerts (or alter when they are received) on behalf of the other is a matter to be determined by each Provider.

79. Having provided the general obligations in Article 23.1 the circumstances where a PCA does not need to be enrolled in alerts are specified in Article 23.2. These are broadly:
- (a) where the account type renders an Alert less relevant;
 - (b) where the Provider is prevented from sending Alerts to the account holder;
 - (c) where the account holder has requested not to be enrolled in Alerts or an equivalent programme which may predate the Order.
80. In relation to the last of these the CMA acknowledges that customers who have already consciously opted out of receiving alerts that are equivalent to those mandated by the Order should not be required to do so again. The intention is for the monitoring requirements to identify whether an alternative programme of alerts meets the requirements of Article 23.2.3 and 23.2.4.
81. The CMA has recommended and the FCA has agreed to undertake work to identify, research, test and, as appropriate, implement measures to increase overdraft customers' engagement with their overdraft usage and charges. Those Providers taking part in the FCA's Alerts Research Programme may be required not to send Alerts or be required to send different alerts to certain customers. It is envisaged that this will be for a limited period of time and will only be in respect of a subset of customers. In the absence of a remedy review, once the Alerts Research Programme has concluded accounts previously excluded from the full application of Part 6 should be included again.
82. Article 24.1 and Article 24.2 set out the circumstances when an Alert should be sent. Where the Provider charges unpaid item fees (or equivalent) the Pre-agreed credit limit may not be exceeded (because the account is not debited) but an Alert should nonetheless be sent. The inclusion of Article 24.2.3 is intended to acknowledge that Providers may be aware of transactions that have not yet been included in the account balance that will, in the absence of any payment in (or change in the Pre-agreed credit limit), result in the Pre-agreed credit limit being exceeded. Under these circumstances Providers are required to send an Alert. This Article does not impose a requirement on Providers to send an Alert when it considers it likely that a Pre-agreed credit limit will be exceeded (eg the account is very close to the limit) but is unaware of any future transaction that would do so. If, however, a Provider does send an alert in such circumstances (ie a Near-limit alert) it would have a similar effect, for the purposes of the Order, as sending an Alert (see Article 24.7.4).

83. Some Providers have proposed that an Alert should only be sent once a penalty free buffer has been exceeded. This would not be consistent with the remedy or the Final Report. While such buffers are welcomed, the default should be that customers know that they are using their buffer rather than wait until it has been exceeded. The Order does not prevent Providers that offer penalty free buffers from giving customers the choice of being sent an alert after a buffer has been exceeded as well as or instead of an alert once the Pre-agreed credit limit has been exceeded. Article 25.1.2 clarifies that where an Alert is sent in circumstances where no Charges would be incurred due to a penalty free buffer not being exceeded the Alert does not need to communicate the period of time the customer has to avoid or reduce Charges.
84. The effectiveness of this remedy will be undermined if Providers are required to send multiple alerts to customers who are aware that their account has exceeded a Pre-agreed credit limit. Article 24.3 is intended to address this. It allows, but does not require, Providers to agree with customers when they would like alerts to be sent (or not sent). In the absence of an alternative agreed with customers, Providers are not required to send an Alert on a day in which they have already sent an Alert which may also be a Retry alert. Where a Pre-agreed credit limit has been exceeded an Alert does not need to be sent again until an Alert Trigger occurs after the account is no longer exceeding that limit. Where a Near-limit alert is sent further alerts are not required until there has been an Alert Trigger after the account balance is no longer below the relevant threshold. As confirmed in Article 24.6 the fact that the Order does not require an Alert to be sent under different circumstances does not mean doing so is prevented or intended to be discouraged.
85. Article 24.4 requires Providers to use reasonable endeavours to ensure that the Alerts are capable of being received as soon as possible after the Alert Trigger. There are various reasons why an alert might not be received by a customer for some time: such as the customer's mobile phone being turned-off or there being a network failure. In such circumstance the Alert is either, not capable of being received or no reasonable endeavour by the Provider could be expected to prevent the delay (or both). This clause is intended to require Providers to take steps to remove delays in customers receiving Alerts that the Provider is able to control or reasonably influence.
86. As set out in our Final Report (see paragraph 15.22 et seq) the CMA understands the interactions between the mandated alerts in this Order and the Retry alerts being introduced separately, and has provided flexibility in the drafting of the Order to allow Providers to take account of this.

87. The content of Alerts set out in Article 25 is not intended to be adopted word for word and does not need to distinguish between the possible scenarios set out in Article 25.1.1 (although they could do). Providers are required to communicate a time for customers to take action to avoid charges (albeit the time might be quite limited) unless they have declined the transaction and imposed an unpaid item charge. This does not undermine the need to send Retry alerts where warranted. It may be that, in accordance with Article 24.4, the Alert is sent on the day after the Alert Trigger. Such customers may not be able to avoid charges incurred in the previous day but should be informed that if they act by a specific time they will be able to avoid any further charges.
88. Article 26 implements the decision set out in paragraph 15.30 of the Final Report. Providers may actively seek to collect existing customers' mobile phone numbers but the Order only requires them to do so when existing customers update their contact details. The need to use 'reasonable endeavours' to collect mobile phone numbers does not require repeated requests where customers have not responded. It will be for Providers to implement it in such a way that is consistent with data protection (and all other applicable) law. The fact that the Order requires automatic enrolment does not prevent Providers having discussions with both existing and new customers about what kind of alert they would find most helpful.
89. The alerts research programme set out in Article 27 is subject to the same consideration as that for the prompts in Part 4. See paragraphs relating to Part 4 above.

Part 7 – Monthly Maximum Charge

90. Article 28 imposes an obligation both to specify a MMC and not impose further charges once it has been met. Article 29 imposes obligations on how it is to be presented.
91. The MMC will apply to charges that could accrue to an account as a result of exceeding (or attempting to exceed) a Pre-agreed credit limit. This would not include charges that would be incurred for using an arranged overdraft or, for example, overseas debit card fees.
92. Schedule 2 of the Order provides standardised terms and definitions for the MMC. This has been informed by the customer research conducted by Research Works published on the CMA website for consultation on 14 October 2016.⁴ The Full Form version is expected to be used in, for example, product leaflets or on webpages setting out the features of a particular PCA. The Short Form version is intended for communications such as text messages or posters where there are more significant restraints on what can be effectively communicated. For the avoidance of doubt Article 29.2 does not require the standardised terms and definition of the MMC to be published every time the MMC is disclosed pursuant to Article 29.1.

93. We understand that not all Providers will impose the fees referenced in the second point of the Full Form description. To ensure consistency of communication the Order does not provide for tailoring of the definition. We do not want consumers to be given a misleading impression that the interpretation of what is covered by the MMC varies across the industry. Providers will, however, be able to communicate alongside the standard terms and definition which fees actually apply to the account.
94. While the description uses the phrase ‘unarranged overdraft charges’, the MMC remedy will continue to apply in circumstances where customers have exceeded a ‘Pre-agreed credit limit’ as defined in the Order regardless of whether they, according to the FCA’s proposed definition in the context of the Payment Accounts Directive, are in an unarranged overdraft. This is intended to be captured in the second bullet point of the description.

Part 8 – Publication of rates for SME lending products

95. Article 30 imposes a requirement on all Providers of Unsecured Loans and standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts to SMEs, for values up to £25,000, to publish and display representative APRs for Unsecured Loans and EARs for standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts (up to the value of £25,000). The Order deliberately does not distinguish between regulated and unregulated lending. As we noted in our Final Report (footnote 15 to paragraph 16.27), the UK consumer credit regime applies to SMEs which are sole traders and partnerships with three or fewer partners, for lending below £25,000. Therefore, much business lending is unregulated (eg lending to companies). It is intended that our remedy applies to lending to SME’s which is in scope of Part 8 including unregulated lending. We would however note that for regulated lending, in the case of a conflict between the provisions of Part 8 of this Order and the rules under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 or the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, the rules under those two statutes shall prevail (see paragraph 100 below).
96. The reference to ‘continuously publish’ in Articles 30.1 and 31.1 means that Providers are required to publish Rates and contextual information on an ongoing basis and make available at all times from the date Part 8 comes into force. Those published Rates and contextual information should be kept up-to-date. Where Providers are in the process of amending the published Rates, they should ensure that the amended Rates are uploaded as soon as is reasonably practicable.

97. Providers are required to show the Representative APR for Unsecured Loans and a Representative EAR for standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts for borrowing up to the value of £25,000. This threshold does not reflect the customer's total borrowing (eg total business debt value) but applies to individual loans as the purpose of this remedy is to show transparency for individual lending products.
98. The definition of Representative is intended to reflect the definition for 'Representative APR' in the FCA's Consumer Credit Sourcebook (CONC) which applies to personal lending. It makes clear that the 51% rule is linked to the Provider's reasonable expectations at the time of the publication, display or communication of the information. Providers should therefore consider, at that time, the relevant agreements which they reasonably expect to be entered into as a result of the publication, display or communication of the information, and ensure that the 51% in that definition takes account of the APR or EAR of those agreements. This should also take into consideration the fact that the information may appear on the websites of intermediaries (such as Finance Platforms and comparison tools) as well as the Provider's own website. Providers should consider whether the representative APR is still correct when they update the information on their website. Providers should also note that, although the CMA has sought to replicate provisions from CONC where appropriate in Part 8, it is not intended to be identical in all respects and there are some differences.
99. For the avoidance of doubt, the effect of Part 8 is to require Providers to publish and display prominently a single Representative APR (or EAR in the case of standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts) reflecting its whole range of products in scope of Part 8 (not to require the publication of customer-specific rates or separate rates for each individual product). However, Providers are reminded that the requirement to display a single Representative APR does not restrict Providers' ability to offer rates both higher and lower than the Representative rate. Furthermore, our remedy would not restrict lenders to using a single Representative APR/EAR when advertising products. This is because the Representative APR should be representative of the agreements that the lender reasonably expects to enter into as a result of the advertising or marketing material. If, based on reasonable expectations, the lender determines that it will only enter into the types of agreement featured in the advertising or marketing material (eg because this is clearly targeted at a particular subset of products or customers) then the Representative APR would only need to relate to those agreements. In other words, if Providers are targeting/marketing products to a particular SME sub-group, it would be appropriate to provide a Representative APR for that product targeted to that particular sub-group. Additionally, if marketing materials are sent to a specific customer, with the effect that they will be the only person to enter into an agreement as a result, then the Representative APR would reflect the rate the Provider reasonably expected to be offered to that specific customer.

100. Article 30.5 confirms that in the case of a conflict between the provisions of Part 8 of this Order and rules under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 or the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, the rules under those two statutes shall prevail. The purpose of this provision is to clarify that Providers must still comply with any rules arising from existing legislation, including those contained in the various statutory instruments made under each and the rules set out in the sourcebooks contained in the FCA Handbook, in particular CONC. Although much business lending is unregulated, Providers are already subject to rules on financial promotions relating to credit agreements with consumers or, where the amount of credit is less than £25,000, financial promotions relating to credit agreements with some small partnerships and unincorporated associations.
101. Article 30.2 makes clear that the obligation to publish and display Rates applies to existing SME lending products in scope of the remedy being offered to customers from the date the remedy is implemented. To the extent that lenders may offer SME lending products in scope of Article 30 to customers at some future date (ie if a product is not in existence at the date the remedy is implemented but is offered at a later date), the requirement would also apply to those new products in scope of the remedy once they are being offered and/or marketed to customers.
102. Article 30.4 provides clarification on the renewals which are in scope of the requirement to publish and display Rates for standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts in accordance with Article 30.1.2 and confirms that this requirement applies where Providers are offering a new standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdraft to existing or new SME customers.
103. In our Final Report we decided to require some additional contextual information in addition to APR/EAR in order to ensure that SMEs viewing the Rates on Providers' webpages are able to understand and compare them. In Article 31.2 we have listed the contextual information which we consider ought to be included as a minimum for Unsecured Loans and standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts. The minimum requirements we have listed for loans largely replicate what lenders have to show for loans on the personal lending side (from CONC 3.5.5), although are not identical.

104. In our Final Report, we decided that product and pricing data for standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts and Unsecured Loans should be made available as open data to intermediaries within six months of the Order being made. Article 32.1 requires that Providers shall release and keep updated, without charge to Third Parties (as defined in Part 8, Article 32.5) charges, terms and conditions, and how they reasonably expect APR and EARs to vary with loan size and length (for borrowing up to the value of £25,000). Providers should also release to Third Parties the information referred to in Articles 30.1 (Representative APR and EAR) and 31 (additional contextual information). For the avoidance of doubt, we would stress that the requirement to make data available to Third Parties under this Article is separate to the requirement for certain providers to release product and reference data under Article 12 which comes into effect on the earlier date of 31 March 2017. Although we are mindful of ensuring that the open data aspect of those remedies which relate to SME lending are aligned insofar as possible and the remedies complement each other, they are different remedies, with the requirements under Article 12 only applying to a subset of providers. We note, however, in respect of Article 12.1.2(b), the only SME lending interest rates that must be made available when Article 12 comes into effect are those which the Providers already publish on that date (see paragraph 33 above).
105. Providers who are in scope of Article 12 of the Order shall release the data to Third Parties in accordance with the Read-only Data Standard, from the date that Article 32.1 comes into force. Given that the product specification information to be made available under Article 12 is almost identical, it is appropriate to align this with the method provided for in Part 2, Article 12 (in accordance with the Read-only Data Standard). However, it should be noted that whilst there is a degree of product overlap between Article 12 and the SME lending remedies in Parts 8 to 10, there are some key differences. For example, BCA and SME lending products in scope of Parts 8 to 10 refer to products offered to SMEs with a turnover not exceeding £25 million whereas for Article 12 the SME turnover threshold has been lowered to £6.5 million. Commercial credit cards are in scope of Article 12 but are not in scope of Parts 8 to 10, although Providers can include credit cards should they wish to do so.
106. Releasing data in accordance with the Read-only Data Standard is not a requirement for all Providers and those Providers not in scope of Article 12 of the Order can decide on the most appropriate method for releasing the data to Third Parties (although can also release the data in accordance with the Read-only Data Standard should they wish to do so).
107. Article 32.3 sets out minimum loan size and length increments Providers should use when making the data available on how APR and EARs vary with loan size and length. Five loan size and length increments have been prescribed. For standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts five overdraft sizes have been prescribed. As minimum increments have been prescribed, Providers can provide a greater number of increments and combinations should they wish to do so. Providers need to comply with the increments set to the extent that they offer products in line with the minimum increments (eg if a Provider offers loans of £25,000 for a term of 5 years then it must comply with the requirement for that increment), and to the extent that APR and EARs vary between increments (eg if a Provider does not distinguish between 1 year and 2 year loan terms when determining pricing then it may make data available for a '1-2 year' increment).

108. As noted in our Final Report (paragraph 16.57(a)), we recognise that the process of deciding upon a Representative Rate may be more challenging for smaller lenders, and we will take this into account in assessing the reports we receive from them and their compliance. For example, for such smaller providers, we will not require them to provide pricing information for those loan size and length combinations, or overdraft sizes, they do not offer, or do not expect to be asked to offer.

Part 9 – Tool offering indicative price quotes and eligibility indicator

109. In the interests of consistency, in Parts 9 and 10 of the Order, we have changed all references to comparison 'sites' to comparison 'tools'.
110. Article 33 requires RBSG, LBG, Barclays and HSBCG to offer a tool in a Prominent location on their websites to enable SMEs to obtain an indicative price quote and indication of their eligibility. As stated in our Final Report (paragraph 16.48) we would remind Providers that whilst we have set out the minimum scope for the tools (coverage of product type and size), we note that Providers developing tools would be free to refine their tools to include a wider range of products and that other banks would also be free to develop tools should they wish to do so. As defined in Part 1, for the purpose of Part 9, Article 33.1, Prominent means that the link to the price and eligibility tool must be no more than one click away from the business banking homepage or on the product or related pages for BCAs, standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts and Unsecured Loans. We have required that this would cover all Unsecured Loans and standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts for borrowing up to the value of £25,000. The reference to 'continuously offer a tool' in Article 33.1 means that Providers are required to offer a tool on their websites on an ongoing basis and ensure that it is available at all times from the date Part 9 comes into force.

111. Article 33.2 sets out some guidelines implementing what we decided should be the minimum information to be returned to the SME customer. This includes providing the SME user with an indication of likelihood of being eligible for a given product at the requested credit limit (Article 33.2.1(a)). Providers are therefore allowed maximum flexibility with regard to how they present to the user an indication of likelihood of being eligible for a given product at the requested credit limit eg using a precise percentage, a percentage range and/or indications of eligibility in words such as 'very likely', 'likely', 'unlikely' etc. However, in providing access to the tool to third parties under Article 34, in addition to providing, as a minimum, the information set out in Article 33.2.1, Providers shall also provide those third parties with a percentage (or the means to calculate such a percentage) giving the likelihood of the user being eligible for a given product at the requested limit (expressed as a whole number) – Article 34.4.2. With regard to Articles 33.2.1(b) and (c) requiring that, for Unsecured Loans and standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts, the tool provide the user with an indicative APR/EAR which they consider to be Representative based upon the information submitted to the user, we note that this indicative APR/EAR may only apply to the user if they subsequently apply for credit of the same amount or term. Providers could usefully provide a clear indication to the user of the size and term of the loan (or size of the overdraft) associated with the indicative APR/EAR to alert users to the fact that the indicative APR/EAR may be different if the user then applies for credit on different terms (ie different size and term).
112. Article 33.3 implements the use of confidence requirement for the tool and requires that Providers shall provide information to the user on the proportion of all users using the tool who received an end quote that was the same, better or no more than 10% above the indicative quote. For example, if an indicative APR of 5% was quoted, Providers would be required to provide information to the user on the proportion of all users using the tool who received an end quote that was the same (ie 5%), better (ie less than 5%) or no more than 10% above that quote (in this example, an APR no more than 5.5%). As with 33.2.1(b) and (c), we note that the comparison between the indicative quote and the end quote may only be valid for customers who apply for credit of the same amount and term as entered on the tool. The percentage displayed in accordance with Article 33.3 would therefore need to be calculated solely on the basis of such customers (ie those that apply for credit of the same amount and term). With regard to the time period that Providers should use to measure the percentage of customers who received an end quote that was the same, better or no more than 10% above the indicative quote, we consider that Providers should measure this over an initial 3 month period once the tools are operational (with a view to ultimately conducting future comparisons over a 12 month rolling period). An additional 3 month period is also allowed for Providers to comply with Article 33.3 once the tools are operational (the timescale for complying with Article 33.3 is now 15 months from the day on which the Order is made). We considered it appropriate to allow the additional time in recognition of the fact that Providers need a period of time to gather data to enable them to provide the indication required to users.

113. We decided in our Final Report that providers subject to our Order should provide relevant access to any two Finance Platforms designated under the SBEE Act for a period of three years and any two comparison tools, including the eventual winners of the Nesta Challenge Prize (paragraph 16.49 Final Report and Figure 16.1). Article 34.2 sets out the timeframe for Providers to provide access to those third parties. An additional 3 months has been allowed for Providers to provide access to Finance Platforms (Providers are now required to do this within 15 months after the day on which the Order is made). The additional time has been allowed in recognition of the fact that Providers may need a short period of time once the tools are operational to work with Finance Platforms to connect the tool to their systems. However, we note that Providers can start the process of working with Finance Platforms in preparation for this at an earlier stage.
114. Article 34.2.2 sets out that Providers should provide access to comparison tools, including the eventual winners of the Open Up Challenge, within 3 months of the end of the Open Up Challenge process. However, to assist the Open Up Challenge process, we would encourage Providers to seek to make prototype versions of the tool available to the Open Up Challenge participants at the earliest possible stage.
115. With regard to providing access to the output of the tools, we decided in our Final Report that the optimal choice of solutions for providing access to third parties may vary between banks and that they may choose between options (b) or (c) as set out in our Final Report (paragraphs 73 and 75 of Appendix 16.1). We have replicated those two options in Article 34.3.
116. The information input requirements for the tools should be primarily determined by banks themselves and they should work with Finance Platforms and comparison tools to develop certain minimum standards in that regard. Article 34.5 makes clear that Providers shall use their best endeavours to work with Finance Platforms and comparison tools to develop minimum standards. The CMA will take into account the efforts and steps taken by Providers in engaging with and working with these third party Finance Platforms and comparison tools when monitoring compliance.

Part 10 – SME banking comparison tools and Open Up Challenge

117. We decided to support the Nesta Challenge Prize (now branded as the Open Up Challenge) as a way of creating one or more commercially sustainable SME comparison tools (Figure 16.2 Final Report). We identified the Nesta process as offering the best prospect for delivering in a timely manner an effective remedy through the entry or expansion of innovative SME comparison tools. We thought that because it was driven by competition rather than regulatory design it was more likely to give rise to innovative solutions and could also provide SMEs with ‘one-stop shop’ tools which do more than simply offer price comparisons (paragraphs 16.71 and 16.72 Final Report). As stated in our Final Report, we would also welcome tools which cover a broad range of lending, as these would add value for SMEs (paragraph 16.90 Final Report). We envisage that the winner/s of the Open Up Challenge may offer a wider range of services than simply that of comparison.
118. We decided to require RBSG, LBG, Barclays, HSBCG, Santander, Danske, Bol and AIBG to support the Open Up Challenge process. This includes contributing, in the proportions given in Schedule 3 to the Order, to the costs of the Open Up Challenge process. Article 35 reflects the funding requirement set out in the Final Report together with cooperation with the Open Up Challenge process. The success of the Open Up Challenge process depends upon the cooperation of the Providers – Article 35.7 makes clear that, subject to compliance with legal and regulatory requirements, Providers shall use their best endeavours to avoid taking any action that might have the effect of impeding or interfering with the Open Up Challenge process and avoid omitting to take any action where that omission might have that effect.
119. In the unlikely situation that one or more of the Providers fail to pay their share in compliance with the Order, this may leave a funding deficit which may have an adverse impact on the Open Up Challenge process. Although we would look to enforce the Order in those circumstances, we considered it appropriate to include a provision dealing with the reapportionment of funds in the event of such a funding deficit arising to ensure appropriate steps are taken to mitigate any adverse impact on the Open Up Challenge process (Article 35.5). We make clear in this Article that such a reapportionment of funds would be paid on the understanding that it will be repaid to the Providers in question promptly when the amount is subsequently received from the non-paying bank. Article 35.5 is also subject to Article 35.6 which provides that the CMA would first consider whether it is appropriate to initiate the reallocation of funding provision in the Order.

120. Article 36 requires the Providers to provide product specifications for all BCAs, standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts and Unsecured Loans for use by entrants to the Open Up Challenge. Given that the product specification information to be made available under Article 12 is almost identical (save for some differences as referred to in paragraph 105 above), it is appropriate to align this with the method and timing provided for in Article 12 (in accordance with the Read-only Data Standard) unless a different timeframe and manner for making the data available is specified by Nesta provided this is not before 31 March 2017. Providers will also be required to comply with reasonable requests from Nesta for sample or draft product specification data to be made available at an earlier time.
121. With regard to the requirement for Providers to provide samples of anonymised BCA customer transaction data reasonably necessary for use by entrants to the Open Up Challenge, we note that the anonymisation methods to be utilised will be a matter for the data partner appointed by Nesta to discuss and agree with the Providers. It is important for Providers to work with Nesta/its data partner to ensure that they are able to provide this data in compliance with their requirements under the DPA. We would expect, for example, that personal identification information would be anonymised (eg account holders' names and account numbers) but not all of the information which is currently anonymised/redacted for PCAs through Midata. The transaction data to be provided under Article 37.1 will include details of factors which drive the costs of BCAs (such as whether transactions are online or over the counter), and shall be provided whether or not the Provider providing the transaction data charges for the service in question. In order to ensure full co-operation with the Open Up Challenge process, we would expect that Providers will work with Nesta and its data partner to ensure that (a) relevant data is provided for the Open Up Challenge Data Sandbox process to achieve the objectives of Part 10 of our Order and (b) the data is supplied in a form that is useful for the Open Up Challenge Data Sandbox process, whilst also remaining within the limits of what Providers are able to reasonably provide.
122. Although we are promoting the development of new SME comparison services, rather than relying on existing ones, sites such as BBI do provide a valuable service. Their funding could be withdrawn before other measures that we are proposing come into effect, including those arising from our remedy on service quality information (Part 3). We decided therefore to require, as a transitional measure, that existing supporters of BBI (Barclays, HSBCG, LBG and RBSG) ensure that BBI continues to collect and publish survey information which permits comparisons between providers on the basis of their service quality by continuing its funding (paragraphs 16.110 and 16.111 Final Report). Article 38 reflects this requirement and provides that those Providers shall continue to fund the BBI in the proportions they were funding it as at 9 August 2016 until the first set of data is to be published under Article 15.4 of the Service Quality Indicators remedy on 15 August 2018.

123. As a transitional measure, we are requiring Providers to make available through two or more Finance Platforms designated under the SBEE Act, details of their BCAs,⁵ Unsecured Loans and standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts for borrowing up to £25,000. Article 39 implements this requirement. We have aligned the timing of this remedy and method for releasing the data with the requirement under Article 12 for Providers to provide third party access to product information and reference data by 31 March 2017. The reasoning behind this is that sharing product information via API will be more useful for the designated Finance Platforms (than say, information in an excel spreadsheet). Further, the time and effort required to provide such product data in other (non-API) formats only a short while ahead of them being made available in API format seems to be disproportionate to the potential gain. We would encourage Providers to take preparatory steps now in engaging with and working with these Finance Platforms with regard to implementing Article 39 in good time. We have included a definition of Prominent for the purpose of Part 10, Articles 39.1.2, 40.1.2 and 41.7.2 making clear that links must be no more than one click away from the business banking homepage. This allows flexibility to Providers to decide on the method for displaying links on their websites (provided this is no more than one click away from the business banking homepage). For example, one option would be for Providers to display the links on their product or related pages for BCAs, standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts and Unsecured Loans. Another option might be for Providers to display a prominent message box (eg a Johnson box) on the business banking homepage drawing attention to the availability of Finance Platforms and comparison tools with the links to the Finance Platforms and comparison tools contained within that message box.
124. Article 40 sets out the requirements for Providers to make available to two or more independent comparison tools, one of which must be an Open Up Challenge winner, details of their BCAs, and Unsecured Loans and standard tariff Unsecured Business Overdrafts for borrowing up to £25,000. The information made available under that Article shall be made and kept continuously available free of charge and without any restriction as to its use and shall be as accurate, comprehensive and as up-to-date as practicable. The reference to 'continuously' means that Providers are required to make and keep the information available to comparison tools on a continuous basis (i.e. not as a one-off occurrence).

125. Article 41 sets out the requirements for the safeguard remedy. Article 41.1 provides that the timeframe for commissioning a new SME comparison tool will be approved in advance by the CMA provided it is no more than nine calendar months from the notification to Providers. A two stage process is provided for in the event that one or both of the trigger events occurred; the banks submit their project plan and specification to be approved by the CMA (stage one) and then, subject to approval, commission the new SME comparison tool (stage two). Time limits have been included for both stages with a view that providers commission the new SME comparison tool within nine months of notification being given that one of the trigger events has occurred, unless the period is extended by the CMA. Providers shall use their best endeavours to ensure that the SME comparison tool commissioned under Article 41.1 shall be providing its services to customers within 12 months of having been commissioned, unless the CMA grants an extension (it is envisaged that such extension would be no longer than six months although this may be extended if appropriate circumstances arise leading to the CMA deciding that an extension of longer than six months is necessary).
126. The trigger events are provided for in Article 41.4. With regard to the second level of trigger provided for in Article 41.4.2, we have distinguished between it not being commercially sustainable and/or it not providing services that enable customers to compare SME banking products and have suggested review factors for each of these (41.5 and 41.6).
127. Article 41.7 provides for the release of data to a new SME comparison tool that has been established or commissioned under Article 41.1 and mirrors Article 40. For clarification, the reference to 'continuously available' in Article 41.8.1 means that Providers are required to make and keep the information available to the new SME comparison tool or tools on a continuous basis (ie not as a one-off occurrence).

Part 11 – Standardisation of BCA account opening

128. Part 11 should be read in conjunction with the banks' proposal coordinated by the British Bankers Association (BBA) published on the Retail banking market investigation case page⁶ ('BBA proposal'). The CMA has accepted that proposal and it is therefore reflected in the drafting of Part 11.

⁶ BBA, Proposal to implement the CMA's remedy to standardise BCA opening procedures.

129. The key component of this remedy is the Standard Information Set which is a series of information requirements which may be fulfilled by asking questions during account opening but may be sourced in some other way. It also includes common identification and verification requirements. The proposed Standard Information Set is set out in Part A of Schedule 3 to this Explanatory Note. The Order provides for the Standard Information Set to exist outside the Order. It will be included as a schedule to the explanatory note and then any valid amendments will be reflected in the version published by the BBA. This is intended to allow considerable flexibility to the industry to adapt the Standard Information Set over time. The current draft of the Part 11 of the Order does not include any provision for the CMA to approve changes to the Standard Information Set although this could be included if it was considered beneficial.
130. We have considered whether the Article 42.2 list of circumstances in which additional or supplemental may be required should be an open or closed list. Having it as an open list would add flexibility but could undermine the purpose of the remedy as there would be effectively no constraints on departing from the Standard Information Set. Instead flexibility has been given by maintaining the closed list but including within it other situations where it would be unreasonable for a Provider not to seek further information.
131. Having agreed a simplified process, there is no obvious incentive for banks individually or collectively to make the process of opening BCAs more complex than it needs to be. For this reason we have sunset this remedy after 5 years (see Article 8). That is not to say we do not see value in the remedy after 5 years but rather that the Order will no longer be needed to achieve its objectives.
132. Article 43 provides for the creation of a Steering Group. The CMA expects this work to have begun in advance of the making of the Order. The purpose of the Steering Group is to assist with the implementation of the remedy and ensure that it continues to adapt to changes. The CMA does not intend to oversee or take an active role in the Steering Group subject to compliance with the terms of reference and governance arrangement. The CMA has recommended that the FCA assumes an observer role and they have accepted.

Part 12 – Monitoring and compliance reporting

133. This sets out the monitoring and compliance reporting requirements. Schedule 4 of this Explanatory Note provides an indicative template compliance reporting form that may be used by Providers. The approach is to have a single report in February each year with any additional reporting only required shortly after the remedy comes into force. The template in Schedule 4 gives an indication of what we envisage but may be amended, particularly as we adopt online compliance reporting. It is not mandatory to use this or any future form to comply with Part 12.

Schedule 1 Part A – Agreed Arrangements

Implementation entity – composition and governance

1. The Implementation Trustee will be supported with sufficient and appropriate resources to enable him to take informed and timely decisions over matters considered by the Implementation Entity Steering Group (IESG), which he will chair.
2. The IESG will comprise one representative from each of the nine Providers specified, five representatives responsible for convening the Advisory Groups (FinTechs, payment service providers, third parties, challenger banks and parties concerned with the implementation of PSD2), two customer representatives (one consumer, one small business) and four observers - one each from HM Treasury, the Payment Systems Regulator, the FCA and the Information Commissioner's Office. The five representatives responsible for convening the Advisory Groups will have equal voting rights with the nine Providers.
3. The Implementation Entity (IE) must draw on the expertise of all stakeholders in the interests of customers. In order to do so, there will be Advisory Groups open to all interested parties to help shape the development of the standards eg Data, Security, API. Advisory Group representatives will represent the views of their constituency and assist the IE to bring suitably qualified experts into the work streams, ensuring the representation of stakeholders' views in the programme of work.
4. To help ensure wide stakeholder engagement and input, there will be an open sharing of IE outputs during the development of the standards via the IE Advisory Group and website. There will be a variety of other communications including regular information bulletins and events, to ensure the stakeholder community is kept updated.
5. The governance process will follow recognised industry good practice, such as that seen through the development of ISO standards.
6. A Programme Director has been appointed and there will be a well-resourced, independently led core programme team comparable with other collaborative programmes.

Implementation entity – budget and funding

7. The IE will be sufficiently and appropriately resourced to enable it to successfully complete the tasks required by the Order.

8. A budget of £2 million has been agreed with the nine Providers to mobilise the programme and make an assessment of the resource required to deliver the remedy under Part 2 of the Order.
9. Funding will be apportioned between the nine Providers based on UK market share, paying 6 – 9 months forward working capital window with a forecast review every 3 months.

Reference and product information data sets

10. In considering the approach to reference and product information, initial analysis has identified a lack of suitable open standards. The IE will therefore need to establish the standards from the ground up.
11. In doing so, the IE will engage with the relevant users of the APIs and other key stakeholders to ascertain their data requirements and establish a core proposition. In addition to the core proposition, there will be an extensible schema of optional elements, which will be more loosely defined.
12. In parallel to this consultation, the IE will establish the common set of reference data elements available across the nine Providers and begin to understand the transformations required to map these to a common standard.

Customer transaction data sets

13. The sharing of customer transaction data is much more complex and requires, for example, robust security arrangements and identity management to protect this far more sensitive information. The IE will ensure that customers are fully protected against privacy and security risks and fully informed of the potential benefits and risks of sharing their financial information with third parties. These protections will need to take account of both the General Data Protection Regulations and the 4th Anti Money Laundering Directive.

Safeguarding customers' interests

14. To safeguard customers, it is important to establish a technology-based Trustmark, which is widely recognised and that institutions participating in the Open Banking Service can utilise. This should be re-enforced through a 'white list' of certified participants available via a central registry. The central registry will also form the centre of the inter-institution trust model, required to ensure that technical measures can be implemented to minimise the risk of rogue parties attempting to impersonate institutions to defraud customers.

Consistency with PSD2 requirements

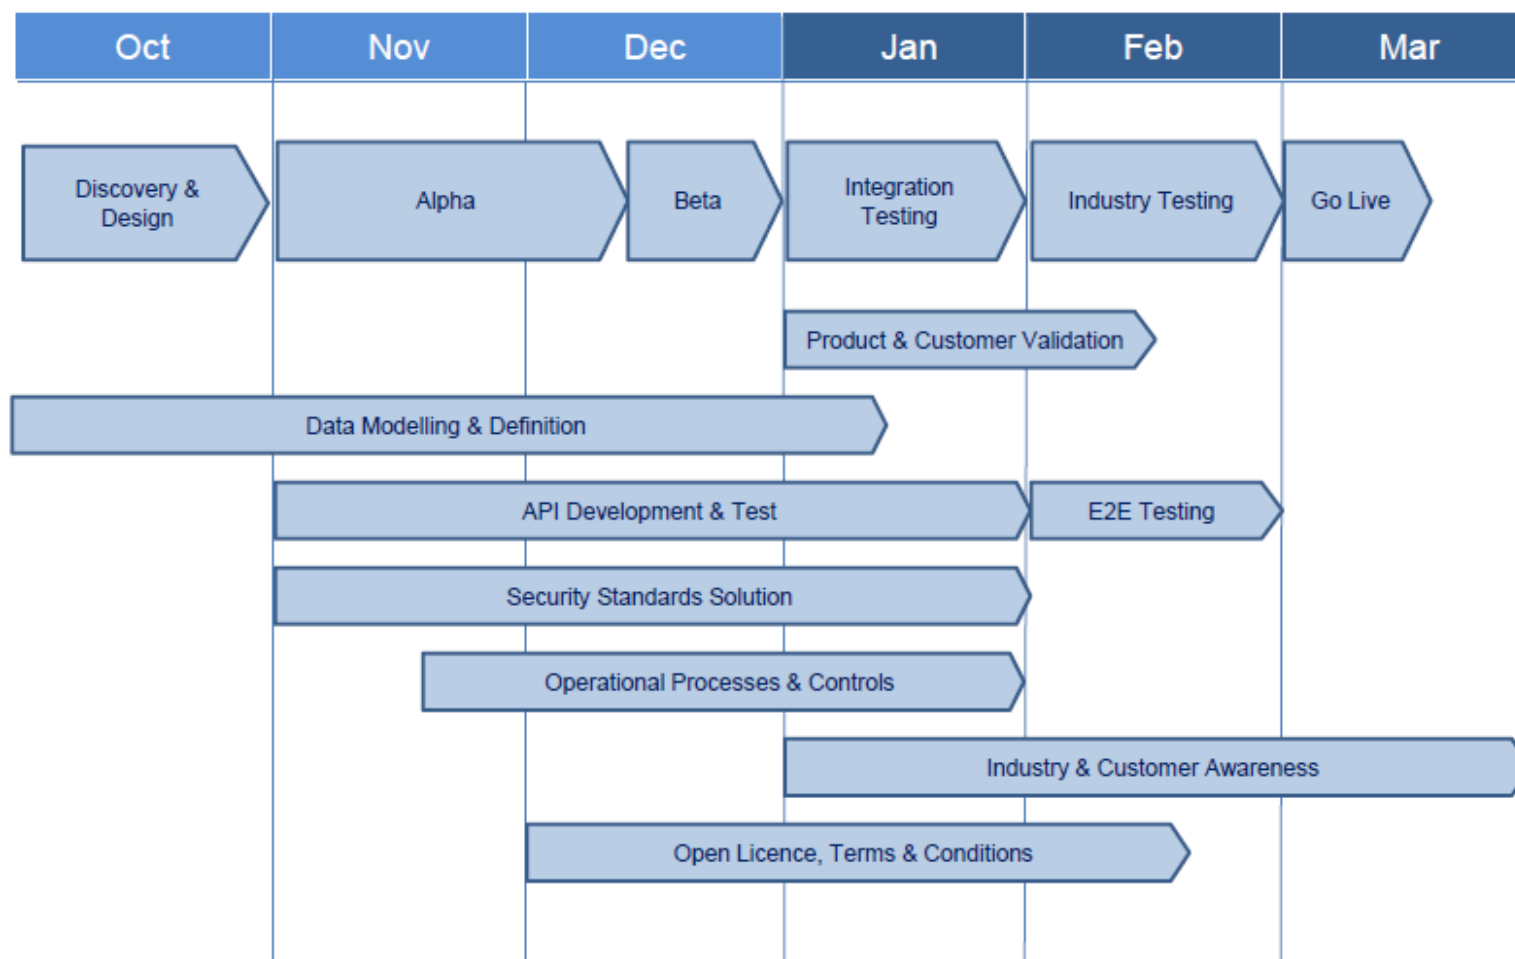

15. To ensure an efficient outcome, the APIs developed will allow adopters to comply with the PSD2 requirements:
 - (a) The IE will seek to minimise the potential for any customer confusion that could have arisen in the absence of this consistency.
 - (b) The IE aims to establish a clear technical framework to facilitate the safe introduction of PSD2, without removing the ability for innovation at the edges.
 - (c) The IE will align write functionality with the payment initiation services that apply under PSD2.
16. The work programme will need to iterate with the clarification of standards for PSD2 and a specific Advisory Group will be set up to help achieve a successful outcome. The EBA have recently published the initial draft of the Regulatory Technical Standards (RTS) for PSD2, which provides some additional guidance.

Future operational governance

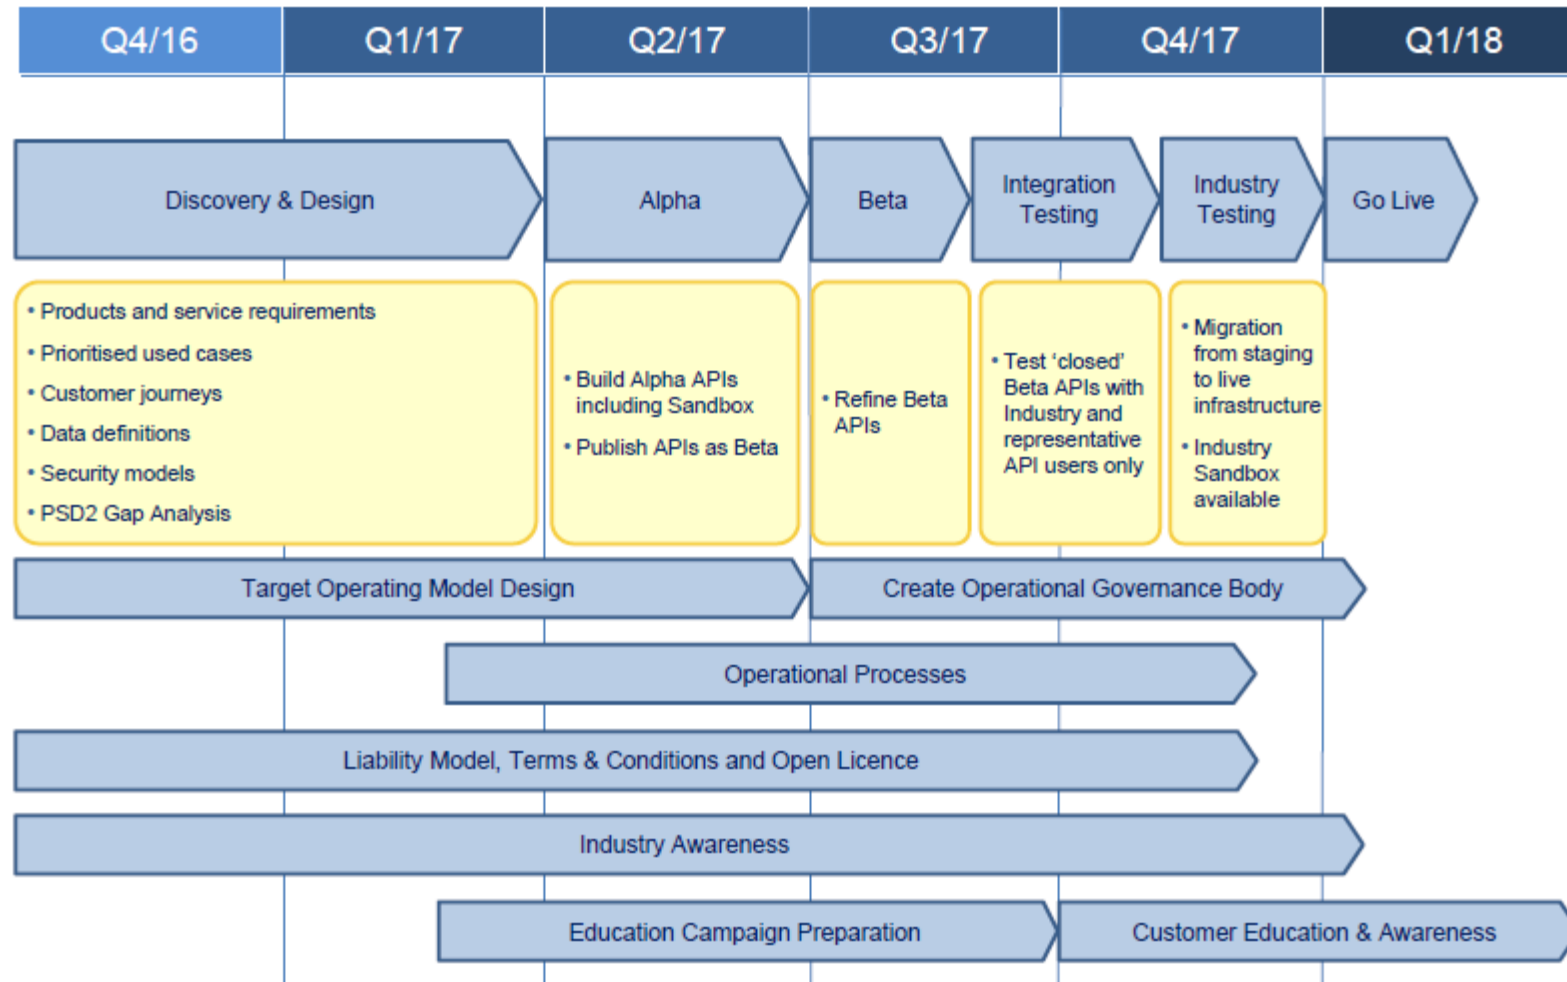

17. The IE and the IT will be mindful of the need to see the implementation of the CMA's remedies in the wider context. They will need to ensure that open banking standards and governance processes are maintained beyond the implementation of the last stage of the CMA remedies in January 2018 and are consistent with the adoption of open API standards in other sectors of the financial services market, for example mortgages.
18. The IE and the IT will therefore consider the most appropriate structures and processes to ensure that the benefits of open banking to consumers are sustained and developed going forward. This may, for example, entail the creation of an Open Banking Authority as foreseen in the Open Banking Working Group's Open Banking report. Valuable work in this area has also and more recently been undertaken by the Payment Strategy Forum.

The Implementation Trustee appointed on 3 October 2016 is Andrew Pinder Consultancy Limited (company number 02239456).

Schedule 2 – Presentation of service quality indicators

1. This schedule contains details of the visual formatting of service quality indicators required in Article 17.
2. All Providers required to publish service quality indicators (as specified in Article 15) shall do so in a consistent visual format, which will be notified by the CMA, to include the following:
 - The heading: Independent Survey Results;
 - Reference to whether the indicators relate to PCAs or BCAs;
 - The month and year in which data is published;
 - The Provider's scores for each metric shown as a percentage;
 - The Provider's logo;
 - A comparison with top 5⁷ Providers for each metric, by showing the percentage scores for each of the 5 Providers which have the highest scores along with the names and logos of those Providers;⁸
 - Horizontal bars showing visually the score of the Provider as well as the Providers to which it is being compared (as outlined above);
 - Statement that Providers are displaying these results as part of a regulatory requirement;
 - Additional information on the survey, such as:
 - The name of the survey agency;
 - Questions asked in the survey;
 - Indication of sample sizes;
 - Dates over which data was collected;
 - A link and QR code to a website⁹ where customers can see the full survey results and more detail on survey methodology and previous results. Alongside the link and QR code, Providers may also include an invitation to ask staff in branch for more details.

⁷ Or remaining 4 Providers in the top 5 if the Provider publishing the data is in the top 5.

⁸ We have considered alternative comparisons, in particular: the percentage scores for the 5 Providers which have the highest scores but with no names given, and the averages of the [3/5] highest scoring Providers shown as percentages. Our customer research found that these alternative comparisons would not go far enough towards remedying the AECs we have found.

⁹ This may be a third-party website (eg the BBA, or survey company), or a page on Providers' own websites.

Schedule 3 Part A – Standard Information Set including Identification and Verification Requirements

Questions Summary
Information that banks will require to open your account:
Category:		1. Core Information For All Types of Businesses that All Banks will Require:	Description of the Information/answer the bank is looking for, with examples. Optional if the SME wishes to populate any of these fields in preparation
SECTION 1 – CORE INFORMATION THAT WILL ENABLE THE BANK TO MAKE A DECISION ON OPENING A BCA:
Organisation Details	1	If you are starting a new business or switching from an existing Provider	Are you starting a new business or are you switching an existing business account from another bank. If you are switching your account from another bank, the bank may ask to see your most recent bank or financial statements
	2	The legal status of your business	Drop down (Sole Trader, Single Director, etc.) with explanations of the different types of entity
	3	Business name	Explanation as to what this means and how it differs from the other name options
	4	Registered name	Explanation as to what this means and how it differs from the other name options
	5	Trading name	Explanation as to what this means and how it differs from the other name options
	6	Business start date	Explanation of what this means, eg if you are changing legal status from a sole trader to a limited company
	7	Details of any existing personal and business banking account(s) you hold at either the selected new bank or at your existing bank	Explain why this is required for both personal and any existing business accounts at the selected bank or at an existing bank. (prompt to provide sort-codes and account numbers)
Business Activity	8	Your primary business activity (eg electrician, online retailer). A description of your primary and any secondary business activity, products and services that you provide	The bank will want to know what your main business activity is (Drop down boxes) A detailed description of the type of work (primary and secondary activities) you do, services you provide and/or your products

			Also, what the account is going to be used for - eg normal business trading; holding funds on behalf of your Clients; Wages A/c; Rent A/c) (free text) Here are some examples of some typical business descriptions as guidance

Schedule 3 Part C – Governance arrangements

Governance mechanism for a periodic review of the Standard Information Set

The Group will be established by the Banks and the BBA under terms of reference to be developed as part of implementation of the remedy.

As set out in the CMA's Final Report, the Group will commence after the Standard Information Set has been approved by the CMA and implemented by the industry.

It is currently expected that the Group's activities will include:

Control of Content and Change

1. Maintaining the content of the Standard Information Set over time, ensuring that the content remains current, valid, relevant and meets the intended aims and benefits of the remedy and Order.
2. Reviewing the appropriateness of the Standard Information Set over time, recommending changes in light of new regulation, developments and innovations.
3. Establishing and maintaining an effective process to oversee changes to:
 - (a) the content of the Standard Information Set;
 - (b) the Banks that are subject to the remedy (applying the threshold of 20,000 active BCA customers).
4. Ensuring that in the context of any change there is an appropriate balance between ensuring the stability of the Standard Information Set without constraining innovation and improvements in process and customer experience.
5. Maintaining close links where appropriate with relevant regulatory bodies, eg: FCA; the Joint Money Laundering Steering Group (JMLSG) and other related bodies.

Communications

6. Establishing and managing the guidelines regarding communication of the Standard Information Set.

Compliance

7. Consideration of a defined set of compliance criteria and key success factors, with appropriate measures, for the operation of the Standard Information Set, subject to the approval of the CMA, and monitoring of compliance through the Banks and/or the BBA providing compliance reports on an annual basis to the CMA.

Modus Operandi

8. The Group will:
 - (a) Make decisions and resolve issues by consensual agreement;
 - (b) Provide practical advice, information and guidance on the interpretation of the remedy and Order to participating banks;
 - (c) Act as a forum through which any proposed issues which may result in a requirement for the standard information to be amended can be raised and discussed ahead of introduction.

Membership

9. Membership of the Group shall comprise:
 - (a) Chair – Executive Director, Corporate & Commercial, BBA
 - (b) Deputy Chair – group member by annual rotation
 - (c) Secretariat - BBA
 - (d) One voting representative will be invited to join the Group from each of the Banks subject to the remedy at the relevant time.
10. There will also be an observer from the FCA.
11. Group members may from time to time request attendance of guest organisations (including for example the CMA, representatives from the SME Business Groups and the JMLSG) at the discretion of the Chair.

Duration

12. It is proposed that the remedy should be in force for a term of no longer than 5 years from the date of the Order.
