Freedom of Information Request regarding information on the most popular operating systems used in the department.

Published 9 November 2020

Dear [redacted]

Letter by email

I write in response to an email you sent to me on 4 November 2020. You requested the list of the most popular operating systems used in the department. Your request has been handled as a request for information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

Q1. Could you please provide a list of the most popular operating systems used in the department?

I am an independent regulator, supported by a small team of Home Office staff who make use of Home Office systems. I have no IT systems which are bespoke to or otherwise owned by me. You may consider a separate request to be made to the Home Office under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act should you require information regarding matters relevant to the Home Office.

If you are dissatisfied with this response you may request an independent internal review of our handling of your request by submitting a complaint within two months to the address below, quoting reference SCC/FOI/07/20/OA. If you ask for an internal review, it would be helpful if you could say why you are dissatisfied with the response.

[redacted]

As part of any internal review my handling of your information request will be reassessed by staff that were not involved in providing you with this response. If you remain dissatisfied after this internal review, you would have a right of complaint to the Information Commissioner as established by section 50 of the Freedom of Information Act.
