Regulatory Policy Committee

Declaration of interest: guidance to members

For the Regulatory Policy Committee (RPC) to maintain the highest standards of integrity and reputation, it is essential that all members declare any interest that they, or members of their family, may have that could give the appearance of a conflict, even where no actual conflict exists.

A 'conflict of interest' is considered to be any connection or association with a third party that is (or appears to be) against the best interests of the RPC, or which could enable you reasonably to be suspected of using your position within the RPC to gain an unfair advantage for or from a third party.

Conflicts of interest are best avoided altogether; however, the RPC acknowledges that conflicts of interest (and potential conflicts) are sometimes unavoidable. In such circumstances the principles of openness and integrity apply, and you are required to disclose and manage the conflicts accordingly.

Conflicts of interest are not restricted to just financial interests but include non-financial interests as well, for instance: enhancement of an individual's career, education or professional reputation; access to privileged information or facilities.

There may be times when a member has private interests that could be construed as being in conflict with the nature of their work for the RPC. This applies to both conflicts of a financial and/or personal interest.

A 'personal' conflict of interest may involve individuals known to you or your family; or by affiliation or a 'pecuniary interest', such as benefiting from a programme or a project's awarded contract, investment or grant. If there is any doubt, it is better to declare a conflict of interest (or a potential conflict) than ignore it or conceal it.

Declarations should ideally be made in advance when it is recognised that a conflict may occur, or if unknown at the time, as soon as when the conflict becomes known.

The RPC subscribes to the Nolan Committee's first report 'Standards in Public Life'¹. This report sets out the seven principles of public life and these are summarized at Annex A.

The categories of interests are set out in Annex B.

Committee members' interests are set out in Annex C.

The Seven Principles of Public Life

Selflessness

Holders of public office should act solely in terms of the public interest.

Integrity

Holders of public office must avoid placing themselves under any obligation to people or organisations that might try inappropriately to influence them in their work. They should not act or take decisions in order to gain financial or other material benefits for themselves, their family, or their friends. They must declare and resolve any interests and relationships.

Objectivity

Holders of public office must act and take decisions impartially, fairly and on merit, using the best evidence and without discrimination or bias.

Accountability

Holders of public office are accountable to the public for their decisions and actions and must submit themselves to the scrutiny necessary to ensure this.

Openness

Holders of public office should act and take decisions in an open and transparent manner. Information should not be withheld from the public unless there are clear and lawful reasons for so doing.

Honesty

Holders of public office should be truthful.

Leadership

Holders of public office should exhibit these principles in their own behaviour. They should actively promote and robustly support the principles and be willing to challenge poor behaviour wherever it occurs.
