Introduction

Belarus is a landlocked country in eastern Europe, bordering Lithuania and Latvia to the north, Ukraine to the south, Russia to the east, and Poland to the west. In its current form, Belarus has existed since 25th August 1991. Prior to that, it was one of the fifteen Soviet republics within the framework of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR). The country name “Belarus” translates as “White Rus”, but its etymology is subject to some debate.

Geographical names policy

Geographical names in Belarus are found written in both Belarusian Cyrillic and Russian Cyrillic and should be romanized using the BGN/PCGN romanization systems for Belarusian and Russian respectively. Belkartahrafiya (Belkartografiya) is an official source for maps, atlases, and other toponym-related sources published in both Belarusian and Russian Cyrillic alphabets. Maps and tourist information published in Belarusian, however, are still hard to find, especially at the larger scale (1:200,000 and larger).

In 2013, PCGN and BGN agreed a dual-language policy for geographical names in Belarus, allowing the use of Russian spellings alongside the Belarusian names. It was agreed that the BGN/PCGN romanization system for Russian would be applied to Russian Cyrillic forms of the names, for example Gomel', Grodno, Mogilev and Vitebsk, while the system for Belarusian would be applied to Belarusian Cyrillic forms, e.g. Homiel', Hrodna, Mahilyow and Vitsyebsk.

Ideally this dual-language policy means use of both language forms, i.e. that where Belarusian and Russian forms are different, both spellings will be shown alongside one another, separated by a solidus, with Belarusian in primary position: for example, Homiel'/Gomel'; Hrodna/Grodno; Mahilyow/Mogilev; Vitsyebsk/Vitebsk (and where the spelling is identical in romanized Belarusian and Russian, that a single spelling would be used, e.g. Minsk; Brest). Additionally, PCGN has offered flexibility in this dual-language approach, so that either language alone can be used according to product/requirement, such that in cases where a single name is preferred, the customer might select the language base (i.e. either Belarusian or Russian) and a set of names in that language could be used. This single language form should usually be Belarusian unless there is a compelling customer requirement to use Russian.

Languages and romanization systems

Until 1991, Russian was the official language of the Belorussian<sup>4</sup> Soviet Socialist republic and the majority of street and road signs, as well as maps, reflected only Russian toponymic forms. Since gaining its independence in 1991, Belarus has continued to use Russian as its lingua franca, with increasing application of Belarusian name forms in street and road signs.

The Constitution of Belarus, Section 1, article 17, states that the Belarusian and Russian languages are official languages in the Republic of Belarus and constitutional amendments in 2022, though the subject of much opposition, reaffirm Russian's status as a state language. Other minority languages include Polish and Ukrainian. Although the state promotes the use of the Belarusian language through education and mass media, the Russian language is commonly used for personal communication, in media, advertising, and official correspondence and is, according to the 2019 census, used as a household language by approximately 64% of the population as a whole<sup>5</sup>. Furthermore, a mix of Belarusian and Russian (known as "trasyanka") is also frequently used, sometimes even by government officials in their speeches.

In one form or another, the languages of neighbouring Poland, Ukraine, and Lithuania are also used in Belarus. The most common of the three is the Polish language, spoken mostly in Brestskaya and Hrodzyenskaya voblasts' as well as in the western part of Minskaya voblasts' – the territories that were part of Poland prior to 1939. Although Polish is not an official language, it is used in the Belarusian mass media and is taught at schools specialising in Polish. After gaining independence, Belarus saw an increase in the role of the Polish language, however, according to census data<sup>5</sup>, of 287, 693 Poles living in Belarus, over half speak Russian at home, 46% speak Belarusian and only 1.2% record using Polish.

The Ukrainian and Lithuanian languages are spoken locally in certain geographical regions. Ukrainian is used in some southern areas of Brestskaya and Homyel'skaya voblasts', while Lithuanian is spoken in some areas of eastern Hrodzyenskaya voblasts'.

Both Belarusian and Russian are classified as Indo-European Slavic languages and are written in Cyrillic script. In addition to the BGN/PCGN system of romanization used by the UK and US Governments, there are several other systems that may be encountered for Belarusian. A national system, developed by the State Committee for Land resources, Geodesy and Cartography in 1998, and revised in 2000 and again in 2007, was successfully submitted to the Tenth United Nations Conference on the Standardisation of Geographical Names in August 2012 and was adopted by Resolution X/6. This system is based on the traditional Roman alphabet lacinka used at the beginning of the twentieth century, and contains the following letter diacritic combinations (BGN/PCGN romanization in brackets): č (ts'), č (ch), í (l'), n̄ (n') š (s'), š (sh), ü (w), ž (zh) and ž (z'). Names romanized in this style may be encountered and may look quite different from the approved BGN/PCGN form eg. Шаркаўшчына in the Belarusian system would be Šarkauščyna, whereas in BGN/PCGN it would be Sharkawshchyna.

Inventory of characters (and their Unicode encodings<sup>6</sup>):

The BGN/PCGN Romanization system for Belarusian does not contain any letter-diacritic combinations or special characters in addition to the unmodified letters of the basic Roman script.

The BGN/PCGN Romanization system for Russian contains the following letter-diacritic combinations in addition to the unmodified letters of the basic Roman script:

Upper-case character	Unicode encoding	Lower-case character	Unicode encoding
Ё	00CB	ё	00EB

All apostrophes appearing in romanization for both languages should use Unicode encoding 2019.

Administrative structure

Belarus comprises six regions (voblasts' in Belarusian; oblast' in Russian) and one city (horad in Belarusian; gorod in Russian) at the first-order administrative level (ADM1). Each of these is further subdivided into districts (rayon in Belarusian and Russian) and cities "of oblast subordination"<sup>7</sup> (horad ablasnoha padparadkavannya [singular] in Belarusian; gorod oblastnogo podchineniya in Russian) at the ADM2 level. A full list is attached at Annex A [note that most internet sources are not currently available for Belarus, and this detail has not been reviewed since the 2013 edition of this document].

<sup>7</sup> The number of these has been reduced since independence, as they have been unified with rayons of the same name to minimise confusion.
