EXAMPLES OF THREATS MADE AGAINST THE HS2 SCHEME

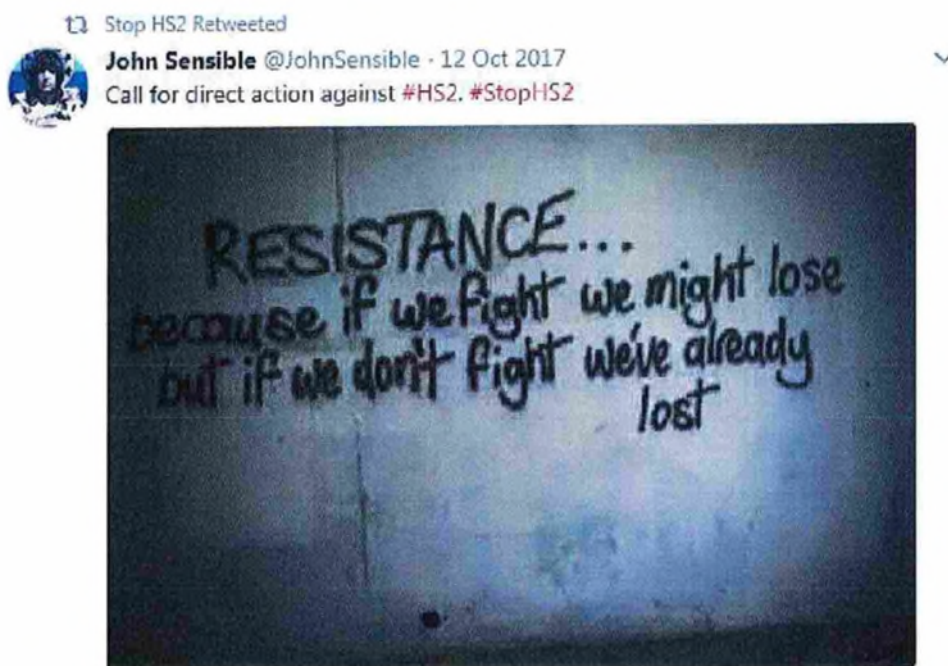

Video called "lockon1" taken on 10 October 2017 and uploaded to YouTube by group calling themselves "Utopian Bohemians": <https://youtu.be/3-kPGfdULDo?list=PLm3tQ5n8ftZJUXzEba-I4InYy484sx7L2>

D38 says (55 seconds into the video):

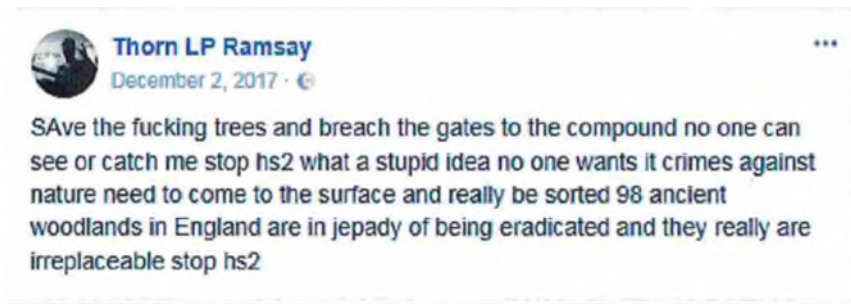

"It is quite funny that the police don't want to come in because as long as we not evicted properly by police we can come in and out whenever we like and stop the works again and again and again and again..."

HS2 tunnel protest will be first of many, says activist

Sat 13 Feb 2021 08:00 GMT

An environmental activist who spent 12 days in a tunnel network underneath Euston Square Gardens in central London says the protest is likely to be the first of a new wave against the climate emergency using subterranean tactics.

Speaking exclusively to the Guardian in his first interview since leaving the tunnel network on 6 February, Lachlan Sandford, 20, known as Lazer, said the protest to raise awareness about the environmental destruction that activists believe the high-speed rail link HS2 will cause would not be a one-off.

He highlighted the construction of a second, smaller tunnel at Highbury Corner, also in central London, from where protesters were evicted after a few hours.

Phase 2a of HS2 connecting the West Midlands and Crewe received royal assent in parliament on 11 February.

Sandford's actions in the tunnel hit the headlines after he was locked to a complex steel and concrete device, which activists underground referred to as "a concrete cake". It consisted of a metal safe encased in concrete, with more concrete inside, and Sandford locked to an "arm tube". He also had a lock on his ankle.

"It was an incredibly uncomfortable and painful thing to endure," he said. "But nothing like the pain and discomfort that the climate and ecological emergency is bringing and other people around the world are already feeling."

There are seven of the original nine activists left in the tunnel, including Sandford's sister Blue Sandford, 18, Dan Hooper, known as Swampy, 47, and Swampy's 16-year-old son, Rory.

The plan was for Sandford to be the first to leave, but a 17-year-old activist left the tunnel the evening before because she was feeling unwell.

"That was my job from the start, to be the person holding the down shaft and protecting the entrance to the tunnels at the bottom. We were thinking it would only take them three days to get to me but actually it took them 11," he said.

As supporters followed news updates on the lengthy process of removing Sandford from the "lock on" - he was locked on for 30 hours and it took the bailiffs 25 hours to extract him from it - they expected the bailiffs to bring him up from the tunnel.

However, he grabbed the lock-on after he was released and ran back into the tunnel, evading capture by the bailiffs.

He said the decision to do that was not premeditated. "That was spur of the moment," he said. "I escaped back into the tunnels for a rest. I was pleased I got a chance to say goodbye to Blue and the others properly."

He said he negotiated lights and other essentials for the tunnellers before leaving the tunnel voluntarily. HS2 says it provided lights but not other essentials.

The time Sandford spent in the tunnel is far from his first brush with activism. His father, Roc Sandford, is a Scottish laird who lives off grid on the small Hebridean island of Gometra, pursuing a carbon-neutral way of life. He has also been active in XR Youth.

“With my sister Blue and others, we chained ourselves across the entrance to a fracking conference a couple of years ago,” said Sandford. “I think it was hard for Blue to lose me from the tunnel community. I love them all dearly and I’m looking forward to when I see them again.

“The HS2 bailiffs are hardcore. They are being fairly heavy with us and it’s pretty extreme, but nothing like what is coming if we don’t get our voices heard. People of my age are not being given a choice because the government isn’t doing what’s needed and that’s when I started protesting more. We need to figure out how to get more MPs to back the climate and ecological emergency bill, there’s about 100 so far, so get on to your MP, and get them to scrap HS2 as well.”

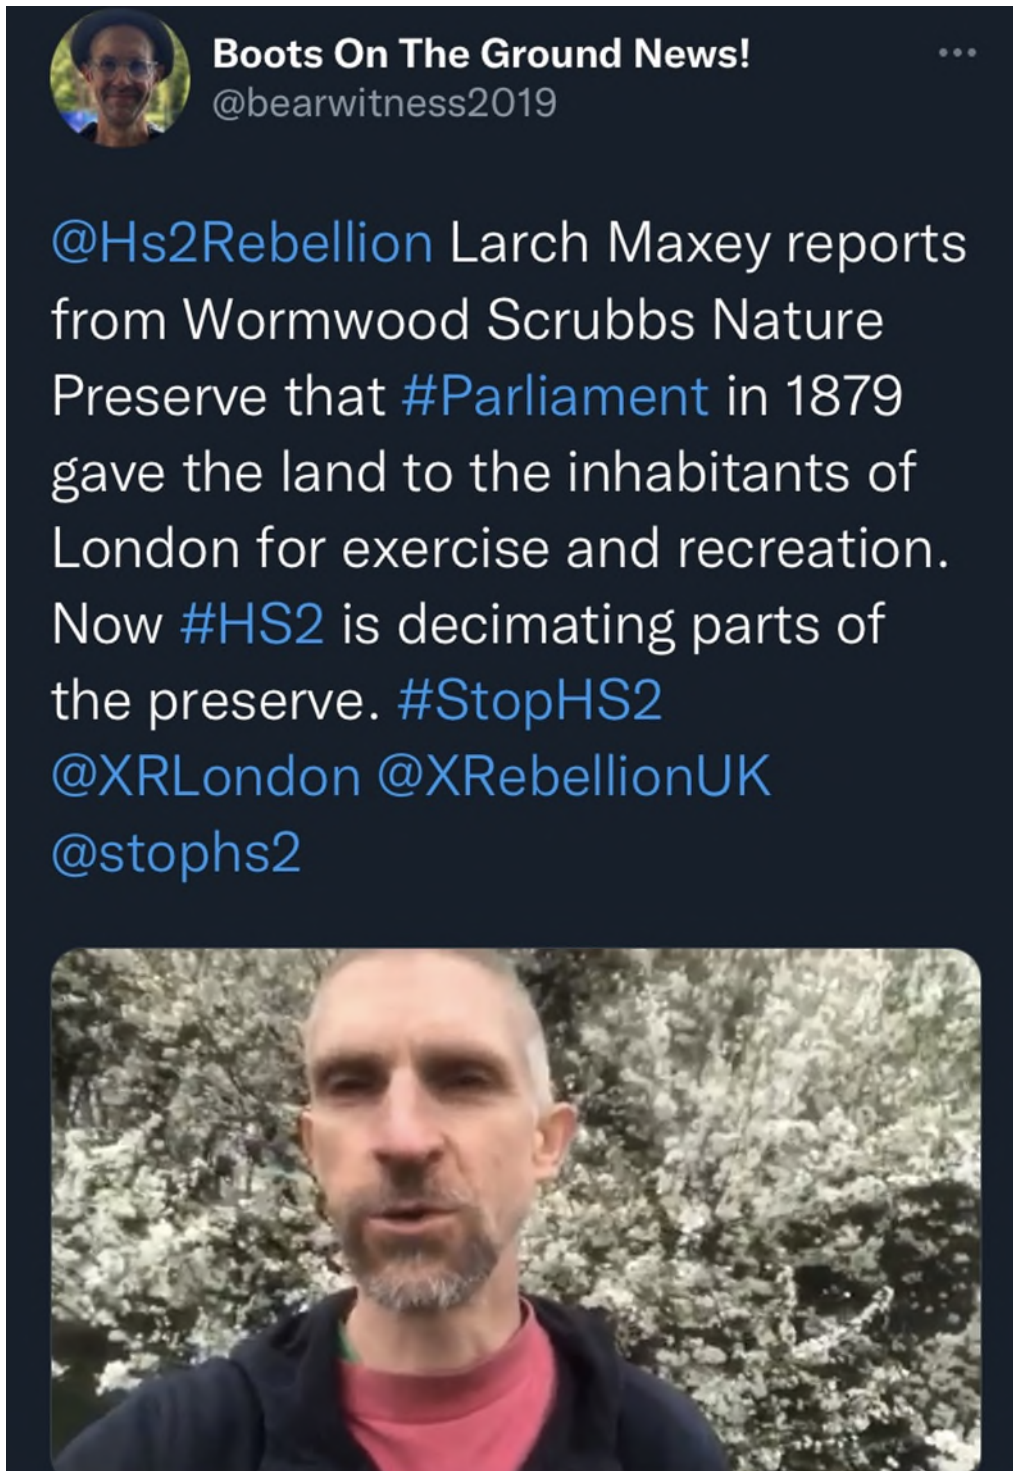

Roc Sandford said of his two children involved in the tunnel protest: “I’m so proud of them, they are standing up for what they believe in. But they shouldn’t have to, it’s too much for young shoulders like theirs to carry. We all need to help them.”

One of the first things Sandford did after leaving the tunnel was get some falafel from his favourite place in west London. But the rigours of life underground have not deterred him from environmental activism.

“I can’t divulge any of my future plans for tactical reasons, but I’m nowhere near finished with protesting,” he said.

MAPS MAPS MAPS!!!
HS2 line and safeguarded area for phase 1 and 2a drawn over OS maps.
This gives you a good idea of where HS2 are working (and how much land they are taking) whether that be for the actual track, tunnels, gas, electric, water and other utility works as well as for 'mitigation'.
Some maps overlap but I have explained which OS map each photo is of and where tunnels and major depots/stations are as well as locations of camps so that people can get their bearings. I have numbered the maps from London going north up the line (OS 192 1, 2, 3 etc)
Sometimes the blue line goes a bit wobbly (I may have had a drink while doing some of them) so trust the outlined yellow. This does not include all the areas HS2 are working or have compounds but gives a good starting point. Red line means tunnel.
Translated from HS2's safeguarding maps pages that are annoyingly chopped up and monotone so have these.

15 November 2021

PA MEDIA

Environmental activists constructed tunnels at their Wendover camp as part of their protest against the HS2 rail scheme

Veteran eco-protester Swampy has said activists' tunnelling tactics can halt the HS2 high-speed railway project.

Swampy, whose real name is Dan Hooper, was one of the last two protesters to be evicted on Saturday from the Wendover Active Resistance (WAR) camp.

After 28 days underground, he said "we can stop it with this tactic" and halt the multi-billion pound scheme.

HS2 Ltd urged "anyone who cares about the environment to support [its] project".

The rail line is due to run between London, Birmingham, Manchester and Leeds and work has started on phase one from London to Birmingham.

GETTY IMAGES/PETER SUMMERS

Dan "Swampy" Hooper came to prominence in the 1990s protesting against road-building projects

The current estimated cost of completing the entire project is between £72bn and £98bn.

Swampy was among protesters who had charges against them dropped recently after they occupied tunnels near Euston Station in London.

He had joined protesters digging a tunnel at the WAR camp in Buckinghamshire - between the A413 and the local Chiltern railway line south of Wendover - where eviction began five weeks ago.

The WAR camp was built on land between the A413 and the Chiltern railway line, south of Wendover

The activist told the BBC: "If we look back to the 90s, we stopped the road-building programme [using] tactics like tunnelling, in fact that probably was the [thing] that broke the camel's back.

"So we can stop it with this tactic which will save the country billions of pounds... they just have to reverse it.

"This project is pumping millions of tonnes of carbon into the atmosphere so this is a greenwash and it needs to be stopped."

HS2 'cleaner, greener'

HS2 Ltd, which was set up by the government to build the line, has said it will be one of the most environmentally responsible infrastructure projects ever delivered in the UK.

A spokeswoman said: "By providing a cleaner, greener way to travel, HS2 will help cut the number of cars and lorries on our roads, cut demand for domestic flights, and help the country's push to reduce carbon emissions.

"Instead of wasting their time and public money on often violent and disruptive protest, we would urge anyone who cares about the environment to support this project."

Swampy said he "hopes more tunnels will happen on the route" and has not yet ruled out taking part in future protests.

"It's too soon after this one to be able to say whether I will be there," he said.

Bluebell Woods Protection Camp (Stop HS2)

A few words from Bluebell

Our mission statement at Bluebell Woods is to work in harmony with the community in order to raise awareness of the Police, Crime, Sentencing and Courts Bill, as well as to. We wish to also build a movement that will put pressure on HS2 Ltd.

Bluebell Woods is named after the beautiful bluebells which carpet the woods, so we are accessing the woods through a field and tread lightly throughout the forest.

To build a strong community here, the bedrock of any movement, we need some funding. This funding will not only fund grassroots activists in their full time work against the system that is causing many issues. It will also help us build up an amazing project renovating the camp into something ter can be proud of. We are planning to build structures in order to defend the land, whilst living amongst nature.

Please help us on this journey and I hope you keep an eye out for updates. If you can't give try and visit us for a cuppa by a warm fire!

Lots of love, Bluebell Woods

We have had an amazing year at Bluebell Woods Protection Camp! We wish you all a Merry Christmas and a happy new year!

We have been very Busy in these Holidays, In the past fortnight alone we have been building the camp with an new welcome spot and tower that, like our movement, just seems to grow!

We have been regularly frequenting our local hs2 gate, playing silly buggers and campaigning to stop hs2! We have been conducting recces and ecology reports around the local area and woodlands, especially in whitmore wood! The largest deforestation on the line at a whopping 5.5 hectares! Despite the recent cop 26 ruling we would halt deforestation and we found that hs2 are already devastating this woodland! We have been conducting actions at junction 9 the m42 as hs2 had closed the road for a whole week causing huge distruption for the country at the taxpayers expense! All at a time when people need to travel to visit their families!

But most importantly we have been conducting ongoing outreach needed to form a community so we can fight HS2LTD. we have so many great locals and wider activists and campaigners that visit and support us due to this important work! With that we have had an initial locals meeting in the town hall, sent Christmas cards and information leaflets to all the local community and continue to build a warm welcoming place where anyone can come and engage! Furthermore, this will be an ongoing venture so keep your eyes out for an outreach roadshow!! 🙌

It's been an amazing year for all at Bluebell Woods Protection Camp we're absolutely smashing it and we can't wait to see how much we can grow and build this community!

We really appreciate all the support of everyone online too, we're saving for a minibus so we can be more flexible and mobile in our actions as "man and equipment over open ground" is what wins campaigns so please click the link above and donate or alternatively please love, like or share and help us reach our goals together!

Love rage and all that in between. I hope you enjoy a few pictures throughout the past few weeks and the 10 months we have been here!

We have been very busy down at Bluebell woods protection camp! We're going down to the gates and delaying work, working with the community and breathing energy almost daily! As ever we are building for the winter and the impending eviction. We have a new gate house in progress and are always filling up buckets!! We are being as frugal as possible with all your donations and aiming to save it for a minibus so we can campaign consistently and protest at any gate at any time of our choosing! This will also enable us to find resources to build with more efficiently! All were achieving is and aiming for is down to the support of people like you and the local community! Thanks for all your support and help!!! Watch this space for more exciting projects! Please come visit us at bluebell protection camp!

!!!Kill the Bill!!!

Two days ago the third reading of the Police, Crime, Sentencing and Courts Bill happened, where 365 votes for and 265 against it took place.

We must keep resisting this Bill, trespass on land, reside on land, just do what you can! It is not okay to be sitting back at this point, freedom is never won by doing nothing!

These are all the properties, and prices paid, that HS2 has forced our home owners via "compulsory!" purchased across the country and rented out, en-mass at above market rates!!

Whole estates in Yorkshire, The mansions at whitmore heaths, whole farmlands around hintz, Lichfield and Aylesbury! All paid for from your taxes, and just look at the money spent! All at a time when there is a housing crisis! If the eastern leg has been cancelled then these properties should return these homes, farms and business to those who were forced to leave!

A year ago today, at 4:30am, the NATIONAL EVICTION TEAM moved in on the stop HS2 Euston camp. A year ago today the eviction of many peoples home began. While many occupied the beautiful trees of the park and others occupied the structure we called "Buckingham palettes", 9 of us occupied a network of hand dug tunnels below the gardens.

The eviction lasted 31 days, everyday with those supporting us just a few meters away outside of the fence. It became even more clear just how loved and necessary Euston Square gardens really was to the community. The green space had acted as a safe haven for so many, particularly through the pandemic. The gardens allowed for many homeless and no fixed abode people to be safe and secure within the walls of the park. It meant that vulnerable people in the area always had a space to go to.

Now, one year on, although the camp dismantled and the gardens fenced off from the public, HS2 are yet to make use of this land. They seized one of the only green spaces in the area and they disregarded local, working class voices that screamed against HS2. Instead of listening to the people, they chose to rob a community for their hellish vanity project.

Throughout the eviction, the police harassed, arrested and fined so many outside of the gates. Yet failed to acknowledge that they had chose to evict a home during a global pandemic. The very notion of seizing community land and evicting one from their home is violent.

HS2 is a classist project that is only upheld because of minimum wage workers. HS2 is a classist project that has thieved far more from working class people than many could even comprehend.

Resist HS2, smash classism in the face.

As usual we have been mega busy building and preparing for the fateful day they try and evict us!
This costs time, resources and money. It's great to see all the work and structures popping up everywhere!

To that end, We really need your help with a few supplies and would really appreciate some help!

We are so close to raising enough money for a minibus so that we can effectively protest in the local and wider areas alike as well as move people and resources enabling us to set up more camps needed to fight this ecocidal project!

Thank you to everyone who has supported us so far, please donate or share to #StopHS2 ❤️

15 June

The pair were arrested after a 34-hour rooftop protest

Two people have been arrested after protesters scaled an aluminium products factory in a demonstration lasting more than 30 hours.

Police said damage totalling thousands of pounds had been done to the Arconic factory in Birmingham.

Protest group Palestine Action claims the firm's products are used in the manufacture of Israeli military jets, but Arconic has not commented.

A man and woman were arrested by specialist officers at about 15:30 BST.

The West Midlands force said a sledgehammer and golf clubs were used to smash windows and skylights and paint was thrown across offices.

Arconic produces aluminium sheet for the aerospace and automotive industries, and also made the Grenfell Tower cladding.

The BBC has approached it for comment.

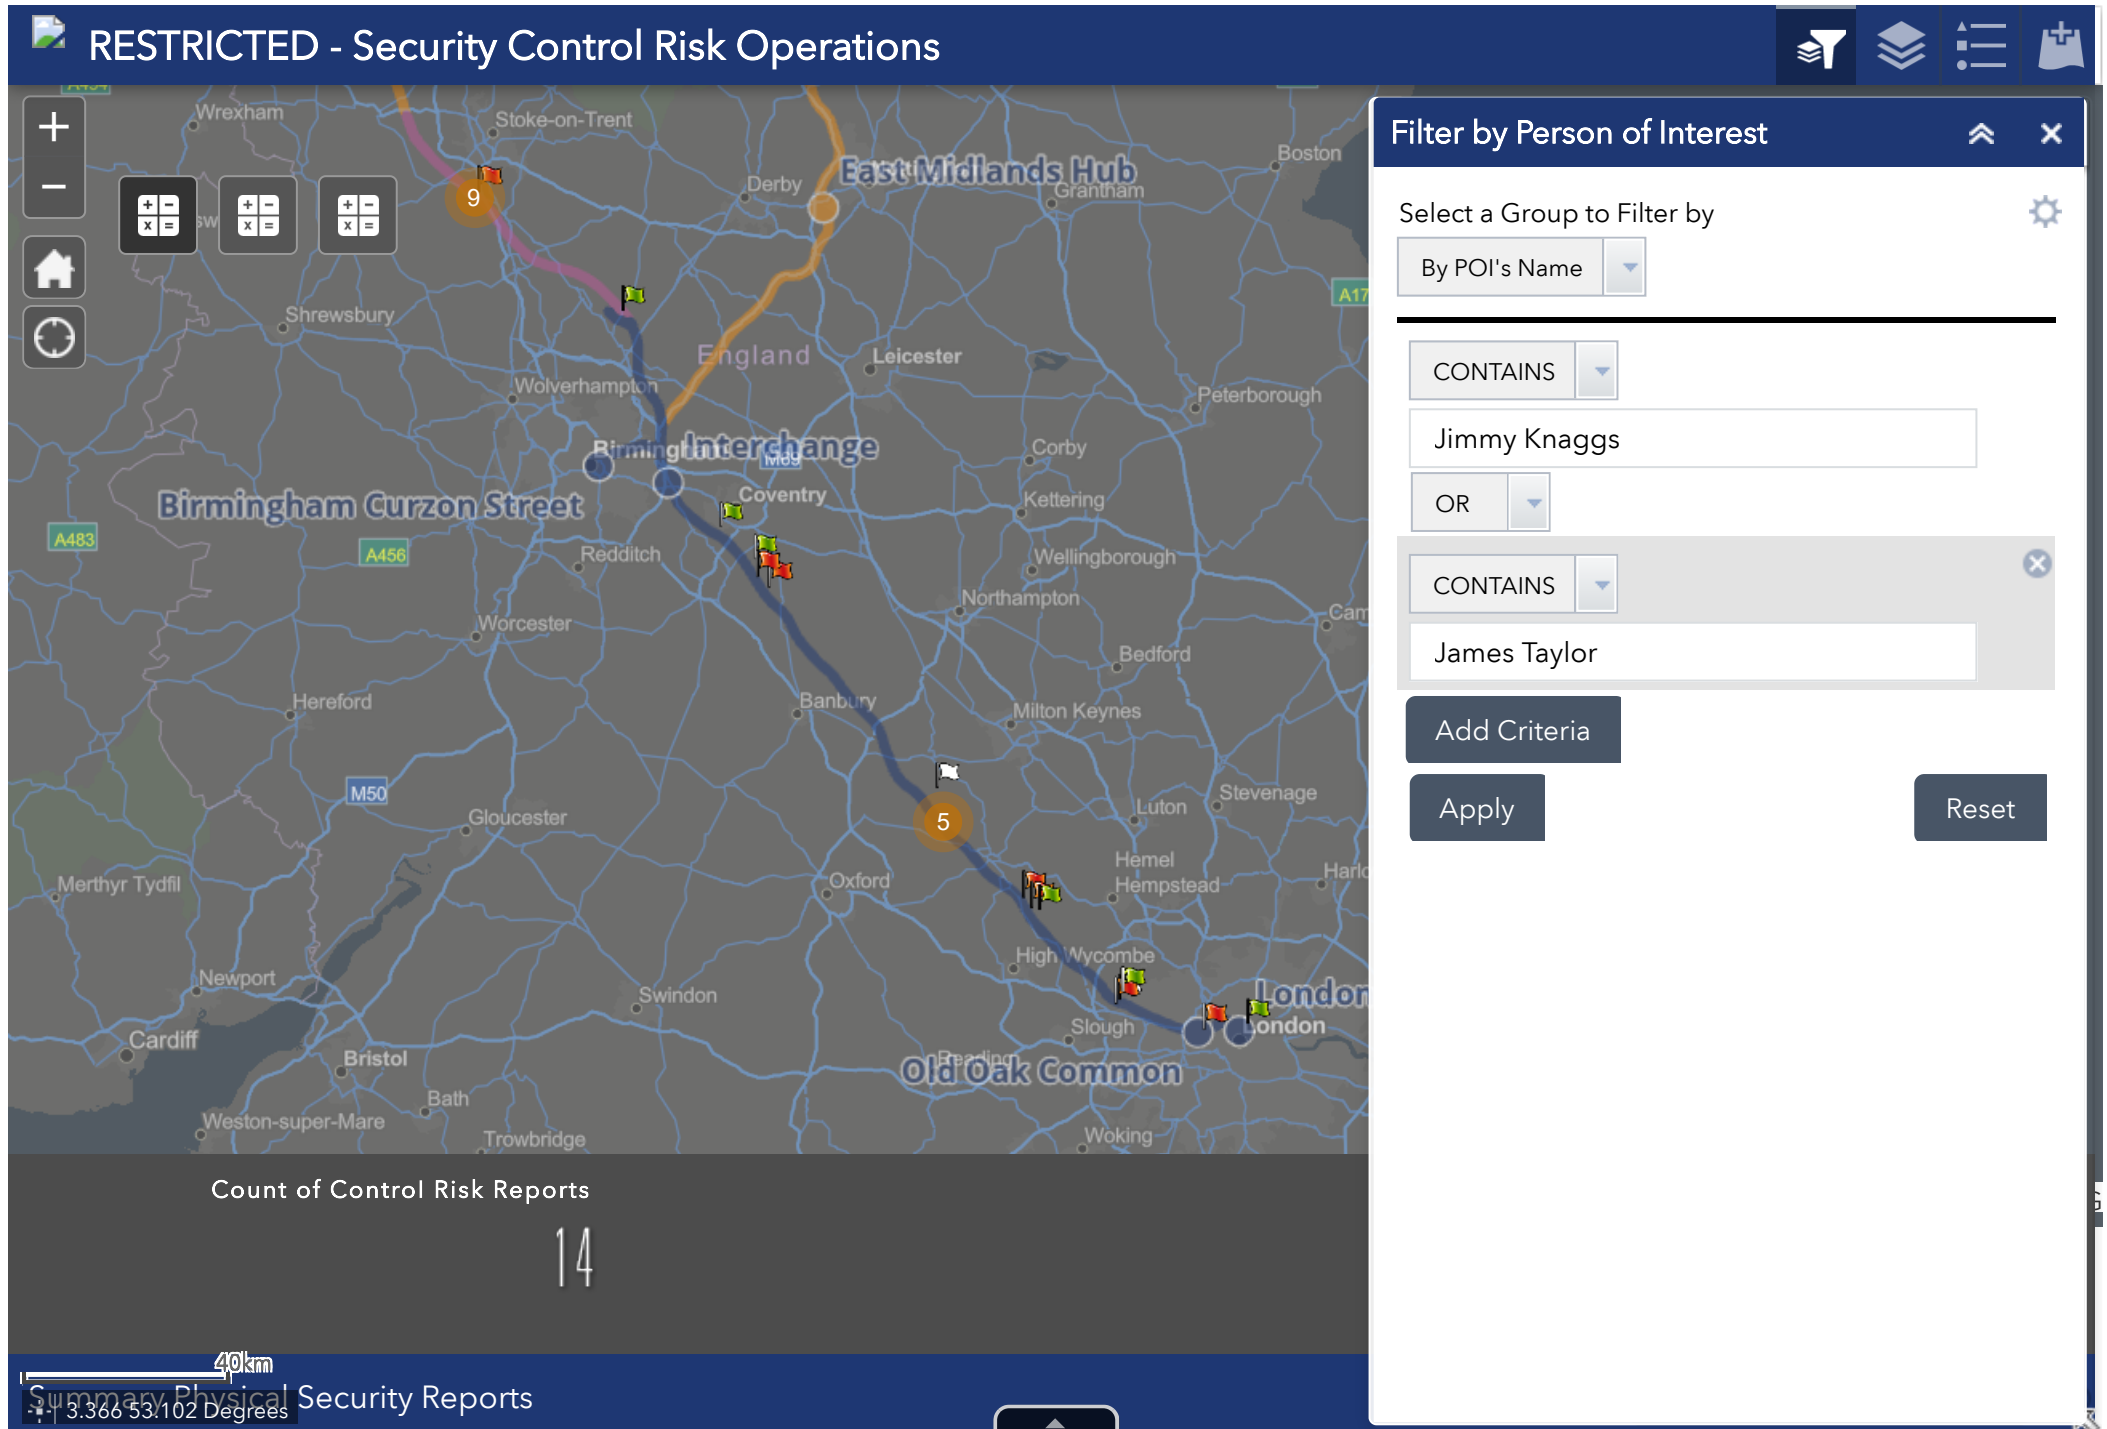

• Latest news and updates from the West Midlands

A 26-year-old woman, from Burton-upon-Trent, and a man, who has not provided police with any personal details, were arrested on suspicion of criminal damage, aggravated trespass and a public order offence.

Protesters are thought to have gained access to the Kitts Green Road factory at 05:00 BST on Monday.

The force deployed a specialist police protest removal team, which is specially trained to work at heights, to detain them.

Balliffs arrived at the camp, in Poors Piece Wood near Steeple Claydon in Aylesbury Vale, at around 6am on Tuesday morning - according to HS2 Rebellion, a group opposed to the high speed railway scheme.

HS2 Rebellion said Lachlan "Lazer" Sandford, who recently spent 11 days underground protesting against HS2 at Euston Square Garden in London, was at the site.

"Bailiffs and police are surrounding the tree I'm in but I'll stay up here until the Climate and Ecological Emergency Bill is passed by parliament, HS2 is scrapped or they forcibly remove me.

In a previous statement following accusations from Sian Berry of the Green Party that HS2 had 'got out of hand' HS2 defended the project's impact.

Responding to that, the company said: "43 of Britain's 52,000 ancient woodlands will be affected by the HS2 route between London and Crewe, with 80 per cent of the total area of these woodlands remaining intact and untouched by HS2."

"HS2 journey will emit 17 times less carbon than the equivalent domestic flight and 7 times less than a car journey. HS2's Phase One construction and operation carbon footprint, over 120 years, will emit less carbon than the road network does in one month."

Tue 3 Oct 2017 13.20 BST

A 62-year-old environmental protester has spent more than 20 hours underneath a large digger as part of a new campaign to block the construction of the controversial HS2 high speed rail link.

Sarah Green, a member of the Green party and a businesswoman in Hillingdon, started her protest under the digger, which is to be used for preparatory demolition work, in part of the Colne valley nature reserve at around lunchtime on Monday. Several other activists later joined her under the digger.

As well as wider objections about the ballooning cost of the project, protesters say the work will damage local wildlife. Speaking from underneath the digger on Tuesday morning, Green said she had spent “a beautiful night” there looking up at the stars.

The occupation is the first of a rolling programme of direct action set to take place along the route of the controversial HS2 development, environmental campaigners say.

Green said she and other protesters hoped they would be able to stop it taking place. While parliament has already approved an act for HS2 to go ahead, they hope to capitalise on opposition across the political spectrum.

Activists have circulated callouts on social media for tents, tarpaulins, climbing gear, warm clothes, bedding and food.

Advocates of the scheme say that when it is completed it will be the fastest rail network in Europe with trains able to carry 1,100 passengers travelling at 250mph. However, the cost of the development is escalating and it has been billed as the most expensive railway development in the world. The first phase alone is costing £24bn, which is forecast to rise to £56bn for the whole scheme.

One of the environmental protesters, Pete Phoenix, said: "This development is going to take out a lot of ancient woodland and pollute the water in the lakes in this area. Nobody wants HS2. It's a Tory white elephant."

Green said she had complained to HS2 representatives on the site that they had not obtained planning permission to chop down the trees.

However, a spokesman for HS2 Limited said the parliamentary act authorising the development stated that local planning permission was not required for this development.

"There is so much wildlife here," said Green. "An osprey was seen recently and I saw wonderful bats here last night. I don't know if they have a licence to demolish this area given that we have so many bats here. We have reported the bat issue to the police because we believe a wildlife crime may have been committed."

It is understood that HS2 Ltd undertook survey work which did not indicate the presence of bats.

Bailiffs have now surrounded the protesters with a tarpaulin, meaning they are unable to see what is happening. But Green said she could hear cars beeping in support and added that she was determined to go on for as long as possible.

"At the age of 62 this is the first time I've been involved in any direct action protest," she said. "This is the start of the direct action protests against HS2 but there is much more to come."

An HS2 spokesperson said: "There is an ongoing incident at an HS2 site at Harvil Road. The safety of everyone involved is our top priority."

The HS2 Rebellion activist climbed the crane in the early hours of Saturday morning using a harness and unfurled a banner that read: "HS2 is corrupt".

The protester was arrested as she came down in the early hours of Monday, it is understood.

HS2 said the Euston protest and ongoing climate demonstrations across London “endangered” the public and put “unnecessary strain” on the emergency services.

But Leayn, when perched in the crane cabin, told the Ham&High: “A lot of people don’t seem to understand the ramifications of what’s happening with HS2.

Picture: Simon Lamrock - Credit: Archant

“A lot of people in neighbourhoods don’t want it, they’re dead against it, but when it comes to actually doing something about it, it’s a very different thing.

“They don’t want to rock the boat and bring anything on themselves and a crane is a massive thing that can be used for promotional materials, the same as anything else. It just makes sense.”

HS2, which will depart to and from Euston Station, could cost more than £100bn and has been subject of strong opposition from Camden residents, campaigners and politicians.

Crane protester Leayn, who is a writer, said it was important HS2 Rebellion’s message “got out in a big way”.

She said her skyline vantage point over London was “humbling” but that the number of buildings too heavily outweighed the number of trees.

Leayn said she wasn’t an environmentalist but someone who cared about the landscape.

"I'm here to try and create awareness," the protester said. "HS2 is not something we need or ever needed, and we really could be improving on something else."

A HS2 spokesperson said: "These protests are a danger to the safety of the protestors, our staff and the general public, and put unnecessary strain on the emergency services."

"All leading wildlife organisations agree that climate change is the biggest future threat to wildlife and habitats in the UK."

"By providing a cleaner, greener way to travel, HS2 will help cut the number of cars and lorries on our roads, cut demand for domestic flights, and help the country's fight against climate change."

"We'd urge environmental groups to help us in getting people out of their cars, off planes and onto low-carbon, high speed rail."

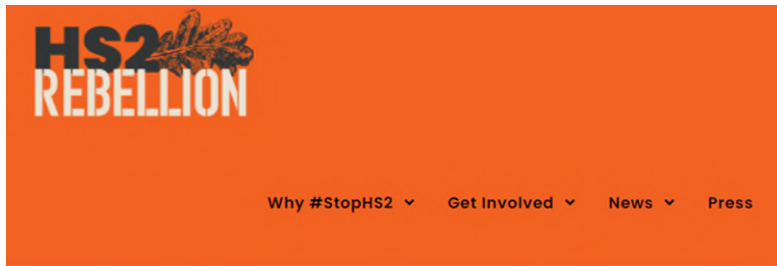

Cllr Oliver Cooper, the leader of Camden Council's opposition, said HS2 was "monstrous waste" of taxpayers' money and that the fight against it was "not lost".

He told this newspaper: "I welcome keeping up the profile of the campaign against HS2, but direct action always risks alienating the very people you're trying to win over."

On Friday, construction work on HS2, a 20-year project that will connect London, Birmingham, Manchester and Leeds, officially started.

Camden Council has been approached for comment.

Saturday 5 September 2020: HS2 Rebel Leayn, 34, has entered the HS2 compound immediately outside Euston Station, scaled a 150 foot crane there and dropped a banner reading "HS2 is corrupt" (see photo).

Leayn, who usually works as a creative artist, has risked life and limb by free-climbing the giant crane and is now securely attached at the top. She has taken only water with her in order to go on hunger strike at the top of the crane until she is either forcibly removed or HS2 is cancelled.

Leayn, who is available for phone and video interview from the top of the crane, comments: "We need to end HS2 and the ruin it has caused. Its ruining lives making 1000's homeless, it's ruining our countryside, destroying 108 ancient woodlands, it's ruining our economy through corruption, 10 times more expensive per mile than high speed rail elsewhere, and it's ruining our future by accelerating the Climate and Ecological Emergency when we must apply the brakes!"

This is the latest HS2 Rebellion action in a week that has seen hundreds of people take dozens of actions against HS2, including dousing the Department of Transport with fake blood and locking on to a bleeding tree carcass at the Home Office and DEFRA.

Three environmental protectors are now on their fourth day occupying trees in Parliament Square, to stop HS2 and promote the CEE Bill as part of ongoing protests held by Extinction Rebellion, Animal Rebellion, Global Justice Rebellion and others.

Athena, 22, also available for phone and video interview from her treetop in Parliament Square, comments: "We ask the government to pass the Climate and Ecological Emergency Bill to address the greatest challenge of our time. This Bill will create 1000's more jobs than HS2 for far less money. But don't take my word for it, ask the people! Let's have a Citizen's Assembly on the Emergency response."

Crane girl has Court fine to pay!

A few words from Dorothea

Remember the person who climbed the crane at Euston Station back in September 2020?

Well, it was their day in court today, and it didn't go so well:

Court fine and damages to the police person for their grazed knee.

My name is Dorothea, and I am fundraising for Flowery Zebra because she doesn't have money like that and she was just trying to save our Euston trees and community from High Speed 2 damage. And for other Euston and High Speed 2 related court fines, expenses and damages.

I really admire these young people and older people too, who take non violent direct action against the wrongs they see around them, and there is not much that is more wrong than HS2 worsening the air quality, and increasing carbon emissions with demolition and construction. Bad for our children, bad for global warming.

HS2 were using the crane to demolish those big black tower buildings in front of Euston station, just behind Euston Square Gardens west. Where they have cut down trees and made a temporary taxi rank.

Now they are constructing another taxi rank, in Euston Square gardens east, cutting down trees and causing flooding on Euston Road where our little park used to soak up rain water.

Please contribute if you can, there is no way I could climb a crane that high on a construction site, Respect!

Goodness that was quick. It's lovely to have such support from you all. If it's okay with everyone we can use any extra for other Euston court related expenses.

We need to continue the fight against HS2 and resist their disastrous crimes against our beautiful ancient woodlands and it's inhabitants as well as destroying precious aquifers, destroying sights of scientific interest, making families homeless, destroying peoples livelihoods, polluting our already dying planet with 1,600 cubic metres of clay slurry known as bentonite.... We are blocking the main gate of the compound opposite W.A.R camp.
Although we face imminent eviction we still stand against HS2 and will continue to campaign and resist their devastating impacts on our beautiful ancient woodlands and it's inhabitants.
Solidarity with all those who have been affected by this devastating project here in Wendover and across the rest of the line.
People power CAN beat HS2 and stop it!
Come to W.A.R and join us!
YOU can make a massive difference by being here.
It's not too late to pack a bag and get here!
Let's continue to show HS2 that we are not willing to allow them to get away with wildlife crime after wildlife crime and continue to rob people of their homes and livelihoods via compulsory purchase order.
This can still be stopped.

At HS2's London headquarters, Xavier has taken the incredibly brave action of gluing his hand onto the building.

The conscientious protectors have now been on the canopy roof for over 24 hours.

Continuing with HS2 is not compatible with averting environmental and societal collapse. HS2 will be cancelled. As a nation, we will not continue to waste £20billion a year for another two decades!

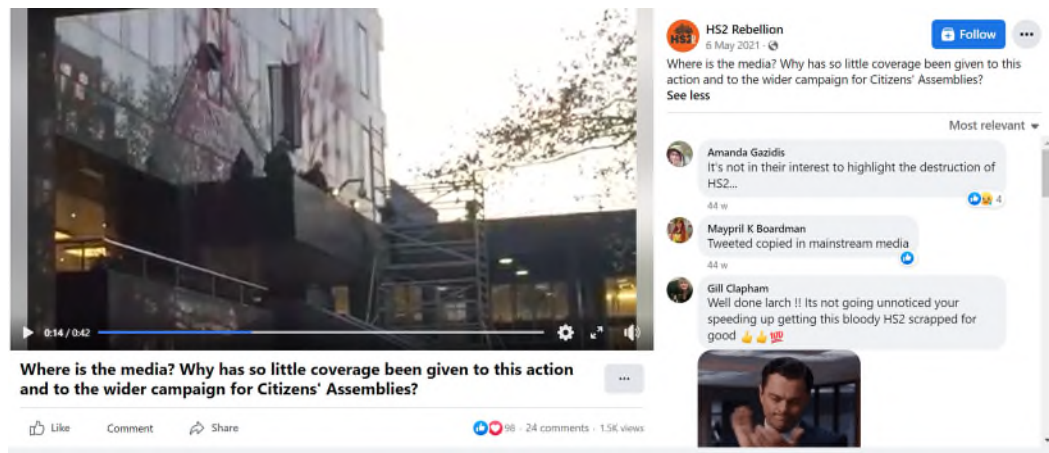

The politicians and their cronies know that, which is why they are frantically trying to grab as much money and land from this project before the plug is pulled.

Hopefully, actions such as this one will help to bring the cancellation date forward.

The protesters mounted the roof and are refusing to leave

Xavier Gonzalez Trimmer, 20, and Dr Larch Maxey, 48, mounted the canopy of building's lobby in Euston, central London, at 10am this morning clutching industrial spray paint machines.

Footage shows the pair spraying the building in neon pink paint to show their support of the Burning Pink Party, which is calling for citizens' assemblies to tackle the climate crisis and other political issues.

Police brought in scaffolding to climb on the canopy in an attempt to coax the protesters down, but the pair are refusing to leave.

Dr Larch, who recently spent 27 days in a hand built tunnel under Euston Square Gardens, said he is prepared to stake out all night and risk going to prison because of his vandalism as long as he raises awareness for the cause.

He and Xavier have three demands, including that whoever wins the London Mayoral election tomorrow commits to running a citizens' assembly on the capital's infrastructure.

A citizens' assembly – sometimes known as a people's jury – is a body formed from citizens to deliberate on issues of local, national or international importance.

Dr Larch told Metro.co.uk: 'We need ordinary people to be making the decisions about our future, our future is at stake. Risks have been taken with our future by governments and by corporations. So we cannot trust them anymore, we have to have people power now for the citizens assemblies.

'We are risking being sent to prison for this action. We're taking that risk and making that sacrifice because the science says we're heading towards societal collapse.

'The last time there was this much carbon dioxide in the atmosphere London was 25 meters underwater.

'The science is very clear on that, but the media hasn't been covering it enough. The politicians haven't been telling the truth about it. We certainly haven't taken appropriate action.'

Dr Larch also criticised the media for 'ignoring' the mayoral campaign of Valerie Brown, The Burning Pink Party candidate for Mayor of London who opposes HS2.

Activists are demanding the formation of citizens assemblies to deal with the climate crisis

He attacked Sadiq Khan, the current Mayor of London, for supporting the scheme on the day voters went to the polls to decide if he deserves another term.

Climate activists say HS2 – a high speed railway project set to link London, Birmingham, Manchester and Leeds – will accelerate the current crisis by emitting 14 million tons of Co2.

Protesters also claim the line will destroy or irreparably damage 108 ancient woodlands and 693 wildlife sites, and that Euston Square Gardens will be built over with a temporary taxi rank before being sold off to developers.

HS2 want politicians to establish a citizens' assembly on the project, as well as wider UK infrastructure.

Dr Larch said he knew his demands would not be met overnight but that he hoped his protest would get more people talking about citizens' assemblies.

Larch Maxey, an anti-HS2, previously spent a month in a hand built tunnel under Euston Station

'Once we get the media talking about citizens' assemblies and the importance of that in the future, we will come down voluntarily,' he said.

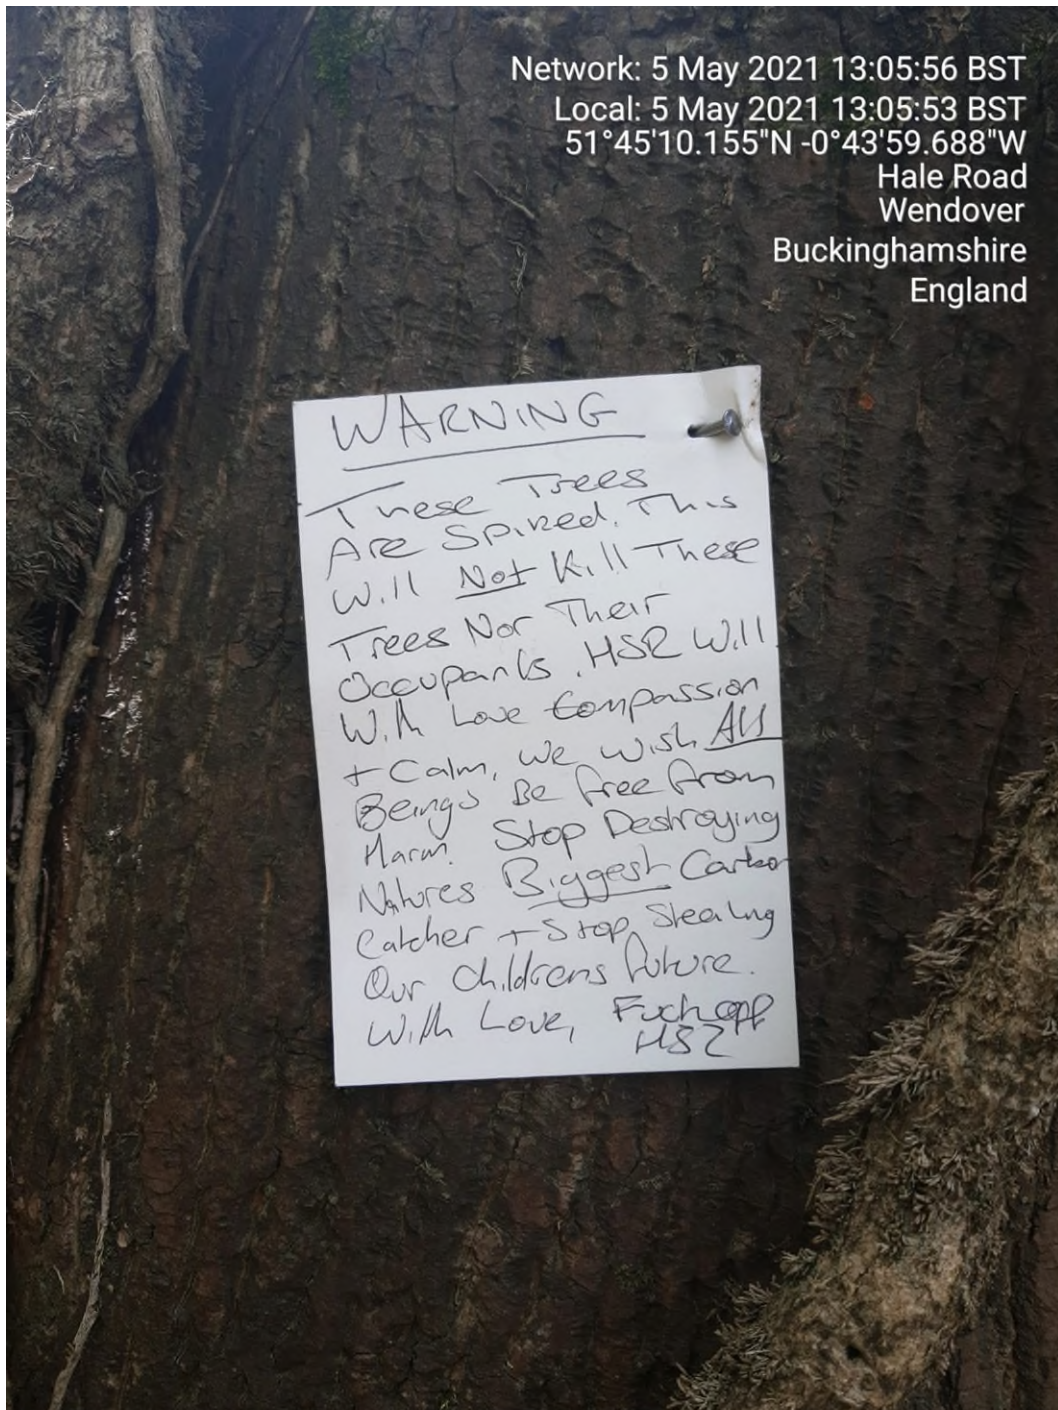

A spokesperson for HS2 said windows have been smashed as well as graffiti sprayed in the protest at the office in Euston, which is shared with Network Rail.

A statement said: 'We utterly condemn this senseless criminal damage.

'HS2 has been repeatedly and excessively targeted by this sort of criminal activity during the pandemic, threatening the safety of the public and our workers, and placing unnecessary strain on the emergency services.

'HS2 will provide green public transport, take cars and lorries off Britain's roads, reduce the need for domestic flights, and help the country's fight against climate change.'

A landowner has reported that anti-HS2 elements have inserted metal objects into trees, intending to cause serious injury by shattering machinery during felling or shredding

This type of tactic, called spiking, has been seen in all areas of the project and alerts have been published - this is a timely reminder that spiking continues

HS2 | ALERTS

On 03/07/2021, it was discovered that a number of felled trees stacked up and awaiting disposal has been tampered with by having nails hammered into the ends

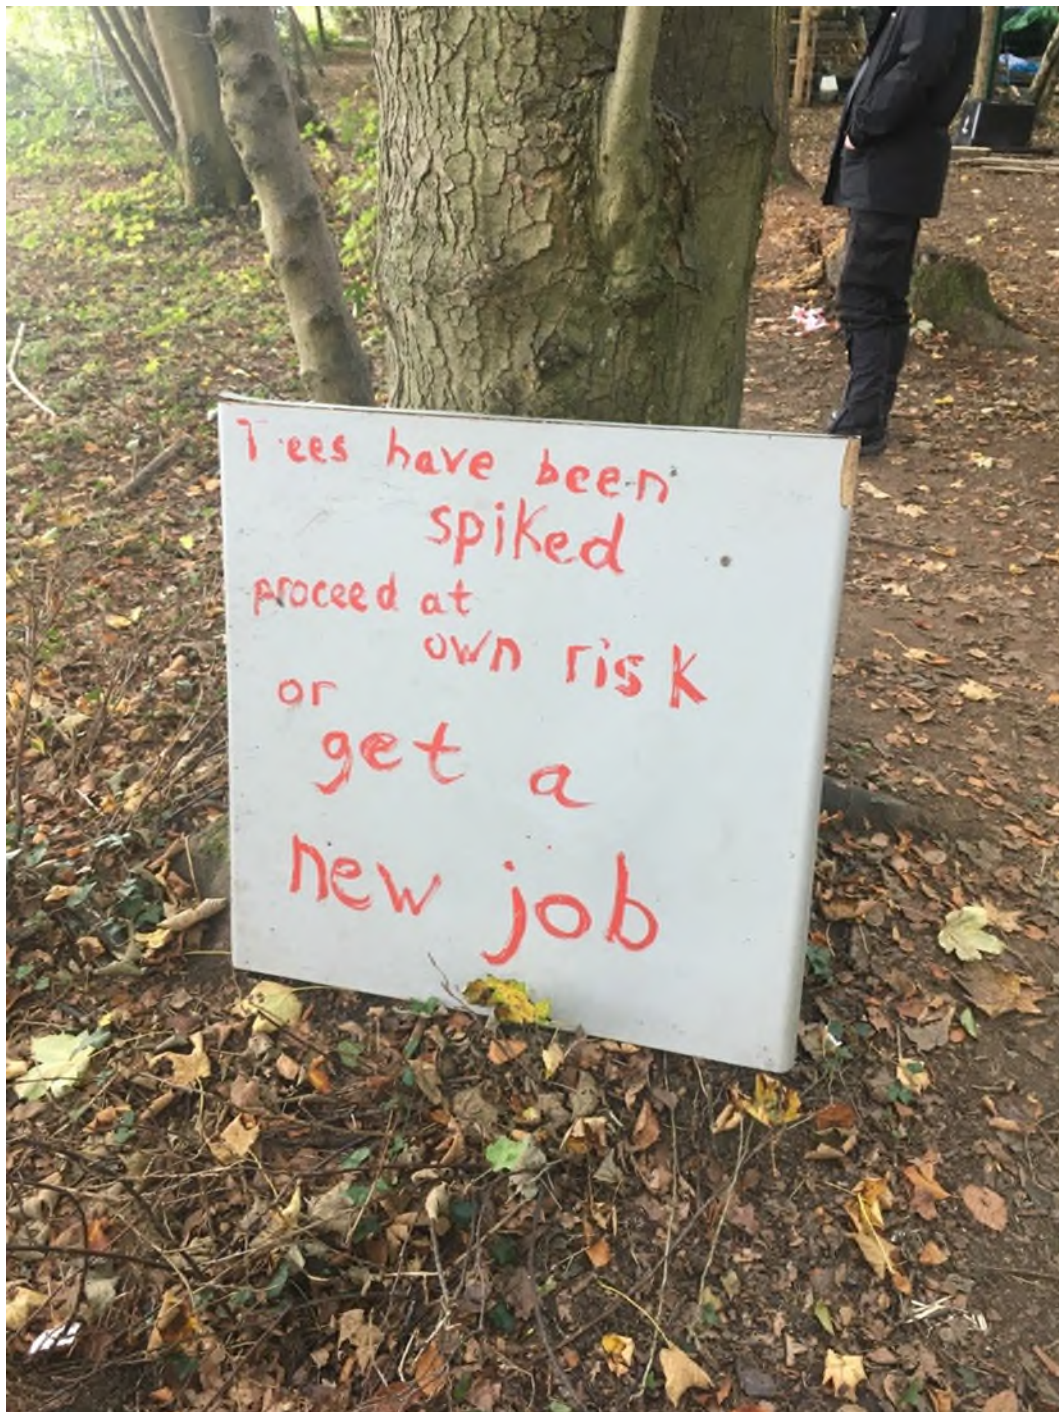

The intention is to either damage wood chipping equipment or cause an injury to the person feeding the trees into the chipper

It is believed this is the first time the tactic has been used in the UK and graffiti at the scene made it abundantly clear this act was targeted at HS2

Spiking, as it is known, has previously been used on trees marked for felling but never felled trees

Although this happened in Cheshire, the person suspected of doing this has operated along the entire line of route, and the tactic is easily replicated so this must be considered a Phase One & P2A issue

Please pass this message to any individuals or companies that you know to be involved in tree felling or disposal on the project, and also to people who manage the procurement of such services so measures such as using handheld metal detectors can be used to keep people and machinery safe

HS2 activists evicted from field after chaining themselves to trees in protest at 'illegal' works

The protesters believe HS2 Ltd doesn't have permission to uproot trees on the land

A small group of activists have been evicted from HS2 land after chaining themselves to trees to prevent them being chopped down.

The STOP HS2 activists tied themselves up on land owned by HS2 Limited in Harvil Road, Harefield, on Tuesday (October 10).

The protest followed a three-day occupation of a digger on the same site the week before.

Activists and the company are locked in a dispute over the felling of trees of the land, which is being cleared to make way for a high-speed rail link between London and the West Midlands.

Sarah Green, who led both protests, told getwestlondon that she was evicted from the land at around 10.30pm by bailiffs who forcibly carried her off the land.

"There are protected species including bats and badgers living in the trees here and they are uprooting them illegally without a licence or any planning permission," she said.

"HS2 limited think that the hybrid bill means they can do whatever they like on all the land they now own but this makes a mockery of all the planning permission laws.

📹 One activist used a bicycle lock to attach himself to the tree (Image: Natural Guard UK)

"We were reassured in the House of Lords that HS2 Ltd would need to ask for individual planning permission at each individual site they worked on."

A spokesman for HS2 Ltd argued that all necessary planning permissions were in place and told getwestlondon: "HS2 will rebalance the economy by connecting eight out of our 10 biggest cities, increase rail capacity on the current system and reduce journey times, while also creating thousands of jobs across the UK."

(Image: Natural Guard UK)

"We understand that people feel strongly about the impact the project will have on their community.

"Reducing these impacts are at the heart of our designs, and we'll continue to work with communities to try and address their concerns.

"They were not in an active working area. The safety of all involved remained our top priority throughout and no-one was injured."

Hambach Forest evictions resume following journalist death

Clashes broke out earlier this month when police tried to force out activists who have been occupying the forest as part of a protest against coal mining. Activists say there's more at stake than just the Hambach Forest.

Authorities last week began clearing makeshift camps from the site where German energy giant RWE plans to expand its coal mining activities. All actions were suspended last Wednesday, however, after a 27-year-old journalist fell to his death from a rope bridge connecting two trees in the forest.

The Interior Ministry for North Rhine-Westphalia said that activists had put up new barriers over the weekend that needed to be cleared. The state government also urged all protesters holed up in tree houses to evacuate the site immediately.

Authorities maintain that the demonstrators have for several years been illegally occupying the Hambach Forest, which is owned by RWE. The energy giant intends to clear some 100 hectares (247 acres) of woodland to mine for lignite — a brown, low-grade coal considered to be one of the most polluting fossil fuels.

Meeting Germany's energy needs?

While authorities quietly tolerated the activists' occupation of the Hambach Forest since 2012, protests have come to head in recent weeks after authorities ordered the woods to be cleared immediately, citing fire hazards. RWE has also said it intends to begin cutting down trees as soon as next month.

The protests over the centuries-old forest have come to symbolize Germany's uneasy transition away from fossil fuels. Protesters have been arguing that Germany should stop extracting fossil fuels and commit to its clean energy goals.

RWE, meanwhile, maintains that clearing the forest is necessary to meet Germany's immediate energy needs. Germany continues to remain heavily reliant on coal, partly to offset Chancellor Angela Merkel's decision in 2011 to phase out nuclear power by 2022.

Today I plead guilty at High Wycombe Magistrates to the offences of aggravated trespass and criminal damage.

Although pleading guilty was not my first choice my solicitor discussed with me that this was the better option given the evidence that HS2 had against me.

The judge was really lenient and sympathetic of our cause and even said the Anti HS2 campaign was one that in years to come will be looked at in a very different light.

12 month discharge and order to pay for criminal damages caused to the tree grabber during it's occupation. I was not ordered to pay any court costs or fines and just to pay for the damage caused to the grabber which I'm grateful for.

I will NEVER stop fighting HS2.

TRIPODS STOP HS2 WORKS IN DENHAM 🚧🚫

? HOW CAN YOU HELP? ?

HS2 is a hugely expensive project which is destroying vast areas of beautiful countryside and ancient woodland as well as people's homes. It will destroy countless trees - and as we know, trees are life 🌳

The line will never be carbon neutral and with news this week that the second leg may never even be started, all HS2 will succeed in doing is cutting 20 minutes from the journey from London to Birmingham - mainly for business commuters at about £240 a ticket. And it's costing the taxpayer over £100 BILLION 🤔💰

WHAT'S THE RESISTANCE PLAN? 🤖

The strategy is DELAY DELAY DELAY. Protesters are delaying the HS2 project for as long as possible in the hope that they can protect nature until the project is cancelled. Today protesters were locked on to tripods to stop work along as much of the line as possible.

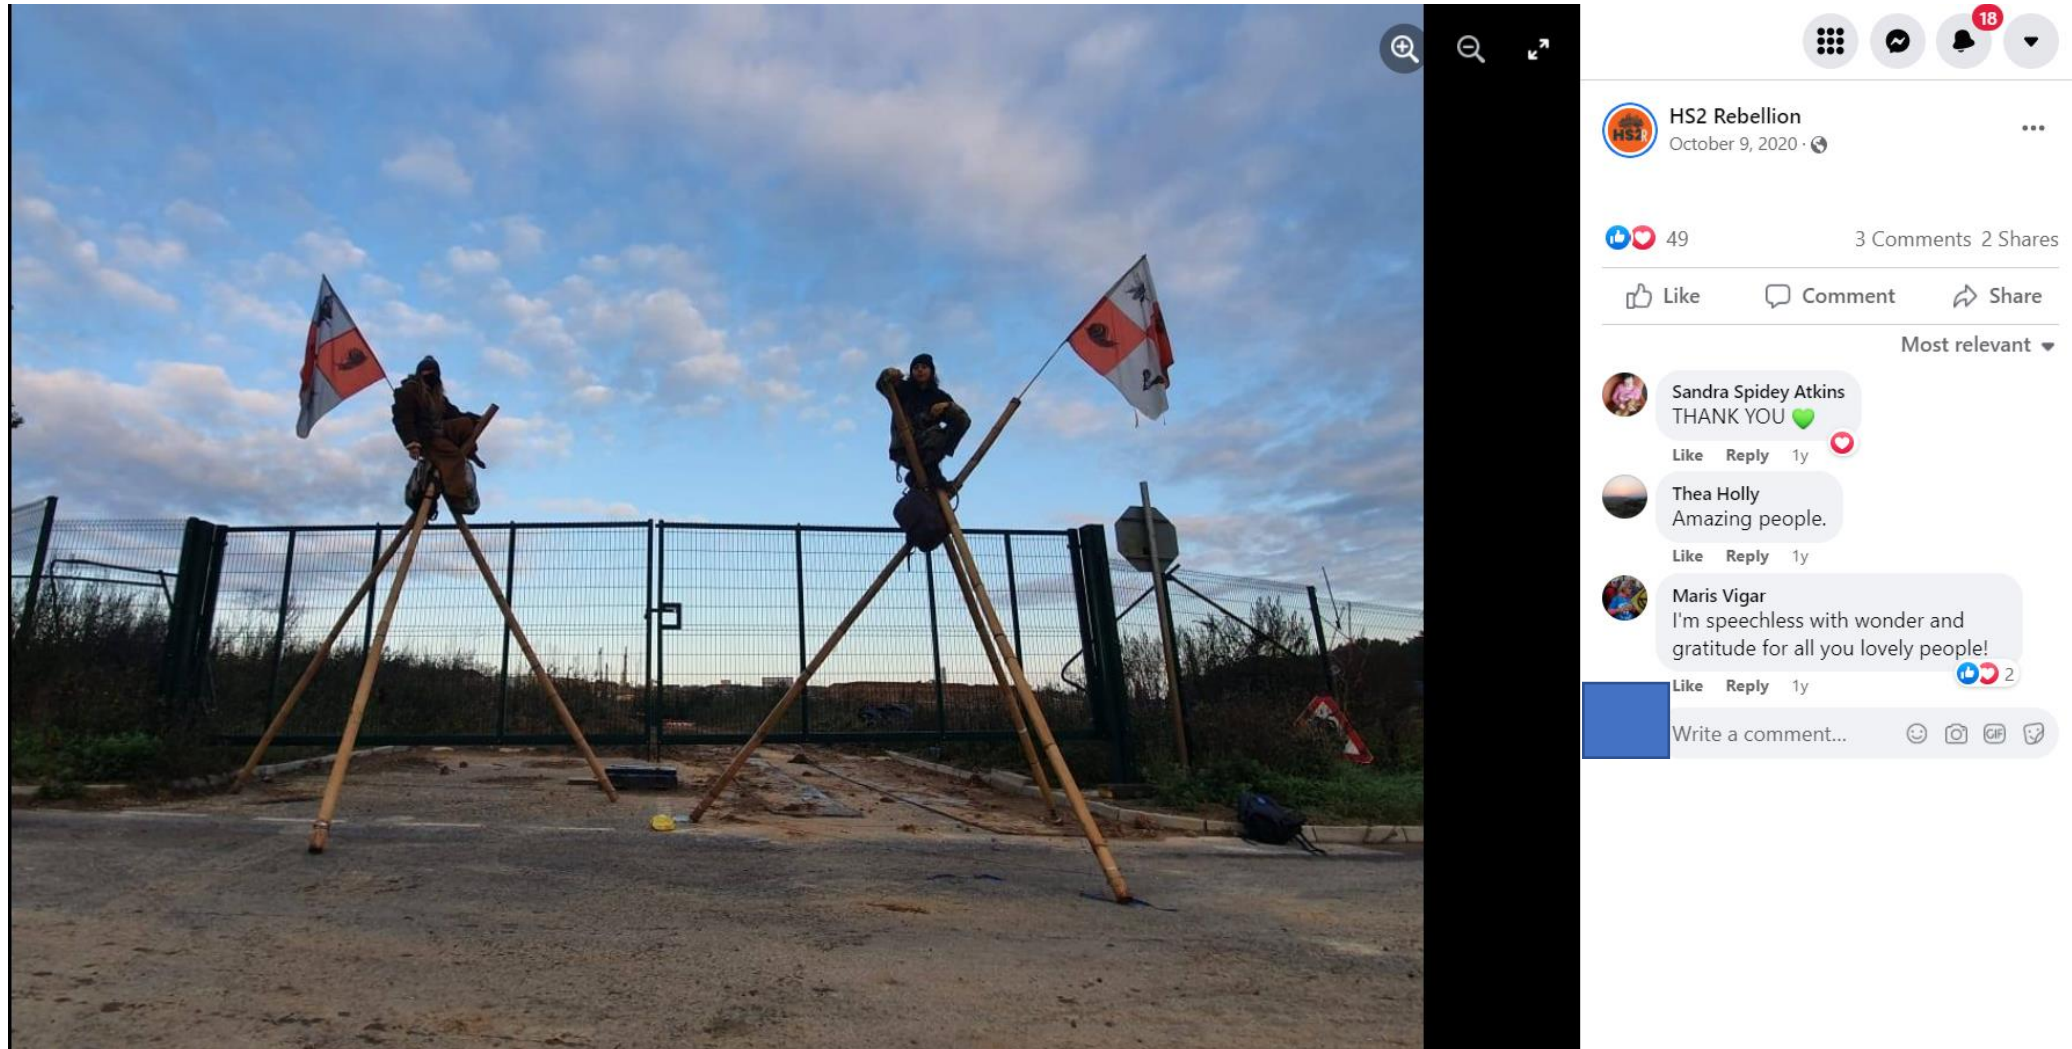

WHAT CAN YOU DO? 🤔

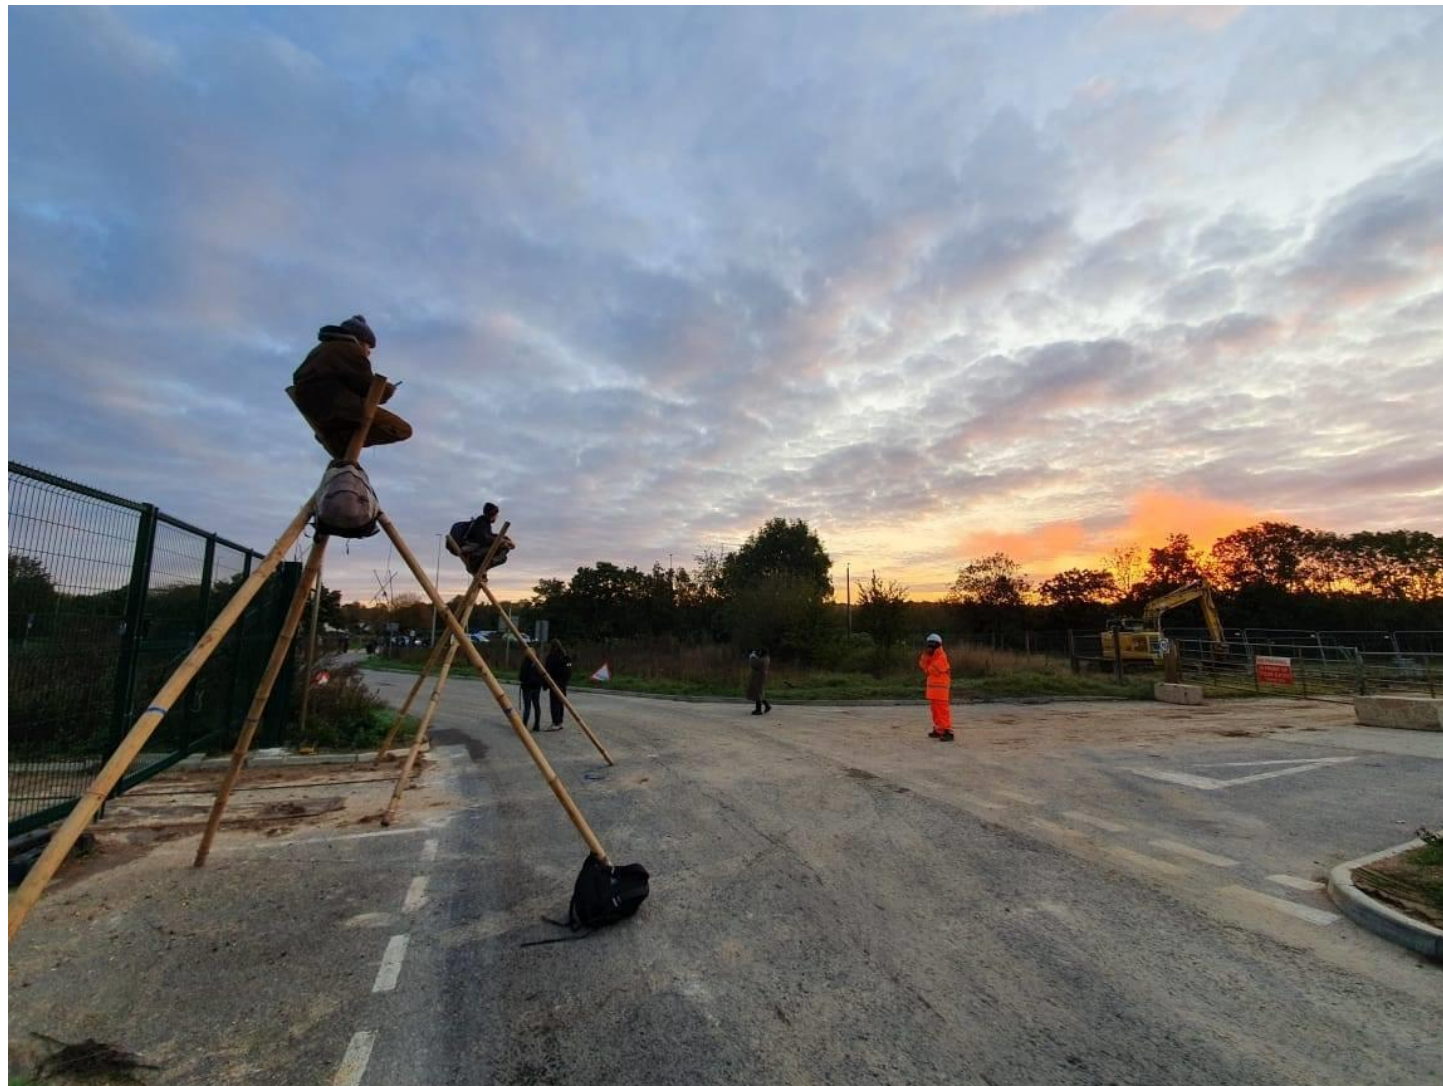

1. SHARE THE LIVESTREAMS 📺 Share the streams on our page so people can see what is going on and learn why it is important to stop the project. Tell your friends why HS2 is so bad and needs to be stopped!
2. JOIN THE CAMP SUPPORT NETWORK ON WHATSAPP 🌐 There is a Protection Camp Support Network (PCSN) WhatsApp group which you can join - contact the HS2 Rebellion page to be added. It is a low-traffic group where callouts are placed for urgent supplies such as tarps and pallets as well as bodies when evictions happen.
3. COME TO AN #HS2 CAMP IF YOU CAN 🏠 If you are able, your presence for a day, a week or all of Winter would be appreciated! Just a day at the camp will allow long-term protesters to leave the camp for a shower and a nice meal.

We want to thank the amazing people who are giving so much of their time, even during this pandemic, to protect nature 🌱 TOGETHER WE CAN STOP THIS!

Police and eviction squads have gathered in a standoff with HS2 protesters including veteran activist Swampy, who is sitting in a 30ft bamboo structure over a river in an attempt to stop HS2 building a works bridge through the Colne Valley nature reserve.

Activists put up the makeshift tower in the River Colne at the weekend to stop workers erecting the bridge and cutting a temporary road through the Denham Country Park woodland.

However, on Tuesday morning, construction crews had set the first half of the steel bridge into place, within a few metres of reaching Swampy's nest in the river, while security personnel lined the water.

Thames Valley police said two men had been arrested on suspicion of attempted assault in connection with the protest

Swampy - as Daniel Hooper, 47, is best known - said that attempting to complete the bridge with protesters in the way would be "shockingly dangerous". Speaking to the Guardian before the standoff, he said: "Normally they'd get a cherry picker and a few police climbers to get me down but in a river it's quite dangerous."

He said that the Denham protest camp, which has occupied parts of the country park for the last six months, was saving dozens of ancient oaks and other trees from destruction. Swampy said he hoped that the action was "at least slowing HS2 down until the government decides to scrap it".

Contractors have been attempting to build an access road to relocate electrical pylons for the planned high-speed railway, and had put in place the concrete foundations of the bridge.

Sam Smithson, an environmental protector, said HS2 had declined proposals to take cut through a nearby golf course rather than the woodland. She said: "Every single day we are witnessing the landscape drastically changing, HS2 is felling trees and irreparably destroying nature before our eyes.

"This is a non-violent peaceful protest and we will continue to do this until the government takes its own advice by acting now to stop biodiversity loss which means stopping HS2."

HS2 said the work was not impacting ancient woodland, and that alternative access routes - needed to divert power lines crossing the path of a new viaduct - would have been more environmentally damaging.

An HS2 spokesperson said: "HS2 has been repeatedly and excessively targeted by political activists. This criminal activity, including illegally trespassing on our construction sites, is a threat to the safety of the public and our workers, and places unnecessary strain on the emergency services during the pandemic."

Work on the first phase of the £100bn high-speed rail line is accelerating at the major works site three miles away at South Heath in Buckinghamshire. Two 170 metre-long tunnel-boring machines are being assembled to start drilling the 10-mile Chiltern tunnels in spring 2021.

The two 2,000-tonne machines were manufactured in Germany before being shipped in parts to the UK. The construction site beside the M25 is the size of 80 football pitches, with the tunnel's south portals already created ready for the machines.

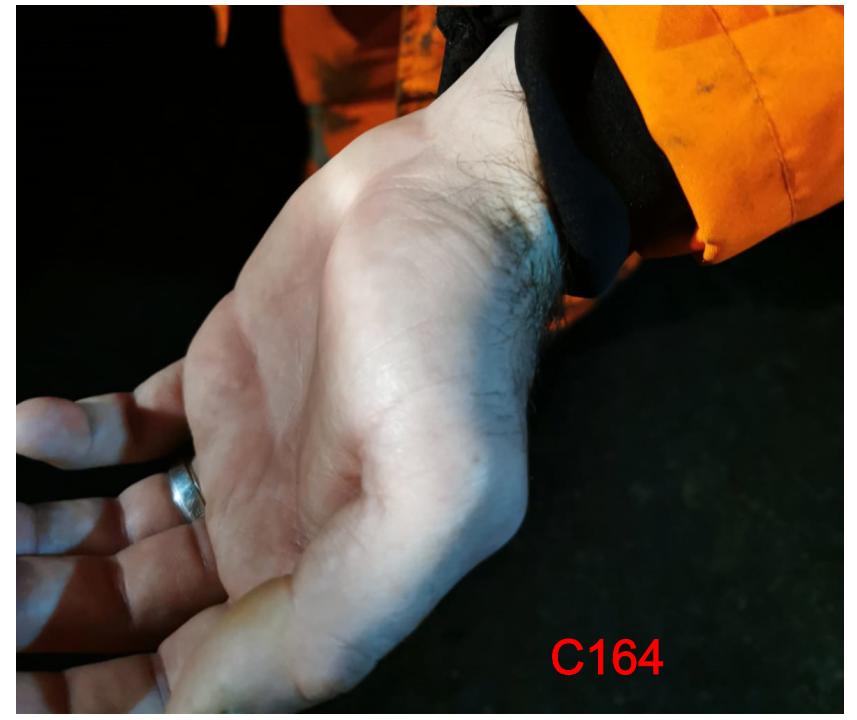

HS2 Ltd's chief executive, Mark Thurston, said: "The launch of our first tunnelling machines will be a defining moment in the history of HS2 - and our work to deliver a high speed railway that will offer a low-carbon alternative for journeys across the UK."

Major civil engineering work started this year, after the government decided in February to press ahead with the high-speed rail network.

HS2: Eco activist Swampy charged after tree protest

9 October 2020

Dan Hooper, better known as Swampy is removed by police in Jones Hill Wood

Veteran eco warrior Swampy has been charged with trespassing after he and eight other protesters were removed from a tree on the HS2 route.

They had set up camp in a tree house in Jones' Hill Wood, between Wendover and Great Missenden, in Buckinghamshire.

Specially trained climbing officers scaled the tree to remove the group on Thursday.

Charges ranged from aggravated trespassing to breaching bail conditions.

Swampy, 47, charged under the name Dan Hooper, was charged with aggravated trespass, along with four others.

- Alice Crawshawe, 21, of Egerton Road, Manchester
- Veronica Tombolan, 23, of Kings Lane, The Lee, Buckinghamshire
- Anne Kahn, 22, of Kings Lane, The Lee, Buckinghamshire
- Ella Russell, 25, of Kings Lane, The Lee, Buckinghamshire

All five have been released on bail, to appear in High Wycombe Magistrates' Court on 16 November.

Richard Fox, 29, of Fore Street, Yealmpton, Plymouth, was charged with obstructing/resisting a constable in execution of duty and was bailed to appear at the same court on 16 November.

A 38-year-old man from Wendover, Buckinghamshire, was arrested on suspicion of two counts of assault, criminal damage and possession of class B drugs and has been released under investigation.

Dana Patel, prosecuting, said that at previous hearing the two men had been bailed not to interfere with the workings on an HS2 site.

He is also charged with aggravated trespass.

His lawyer said he had been bailed on the condition of his address being the tree house, where he had been living for three months. He was found not to have breached the conditions.

He is also accused of aggravated trespass, criminal damage, assault, obstructing police and interfere/ misuse something provided to meet statutory health safety or welfare provision.

Both men are back in court on November 20.

HS2 protesters dig tunnel to thwart Euston eviction

26 January

One protester said: "This is the only way I can effect change"

People campaigning against the HS2 rail project have dug a tunnel near Euston station, in a bid to prevent their eviction from a protest camp.

In September, members of HS2 Rebellion set up a Tree Protection Camp in Euston Square Gardens in central London to protest against the £106bn scheme.

They claim the tunnel is 100ft (30m) long and has taken two months to dig.

One protester, identified only as Blue, told the BBC: "It is all very dangerous and life-threatening but it is all worth it. This is the only way I can effect change, I would sacrifice everything for the climate ecological emergency to not be happening."

The 18-year-old added: "We want to be as safe as possible. It is not about us martyring ourselves, it is about delaying and stopping HS2."

Demonstrators have previously built tree houses and scaled cranes near the HS2 Euston site

A spokeswoman for HS2 said tunnel protests were "costly to the taxpayer".

She added: "These are a danger to the safety of the protesters, HS2 staff, High Court enforcement officers and the general public, as well as putting unnecessary strain on the emergency services during the pandemic.

"Safety is our first priority when taking possession of land and removing illegal encampments."

- When will HS2 open and how much will it cost?
- HS2: Anger, frustration versus promises of progress

British Transport Police said it was aware of the tunnel but it was a matter for the Met Police, which said no complaint yet had been made.

HS2 is set to link London, Birmingham, Manchester and Leeds. It is hoped the 20-year project will reduce rail passenger overcrowding and help to rebalance the UK's economy.

The campaign group alleges HS2 is the "most expensive, wasteful and destructive project in UK history" and that it is "set to destroy or irreparably damage 108 ancient woodlands and 693 wildlife sites".

However, HS2 bosses have said seven million trees will be planted during phase one of the project and that much ancient woodland will "remain intact".

Seasoned activist Daniel Cooper - better known as Swampy - has been at Euston supporting the campaigners

Transport Secretary Grant Shapps told MPs in September that the first phase of the high-speed rail link between London and Birmingham would not open until 2028 at the earliest.

The second phase, to Manchester and Leeds, was due to open in 2032-33 but that has been pushed back to 2035-40.

Network Rail, which owns the land, has been approached for a comment about the tunnel.

HS2 protester Dr Larch Maxey said the tunnel was "warm and quiet"

Analysis

By BBC London's transport correspondent Tom Edwards

Tunnelling as a form of environmental protest has a long history in the UK.

In the 1990s it was one of the ways that pushed environmental concerns into the headlines and changed perceptions.

In one of the environmental protesters' tunnelling guides, written by "Disco Dave", it says:

"In the world of NVDA (non-violent direct action) there are few defence tactics that can compare with the protest tunnel. Dangerous, laborious and time consuming, tunnelling is the ultimate and desperate tactic of desperate people in desperate times."

The first protest tunnel goes back to the M11 and 1993 but they only really developed during the Newbury Bypass protests in 1996.

Protest tunnels against the A30 in Devon and Manchester Airport's second runway then followed.

Not only did they make household names of environmental campaigners like "Swampy" but they arguably changed transport policy - road-building reduced massively.

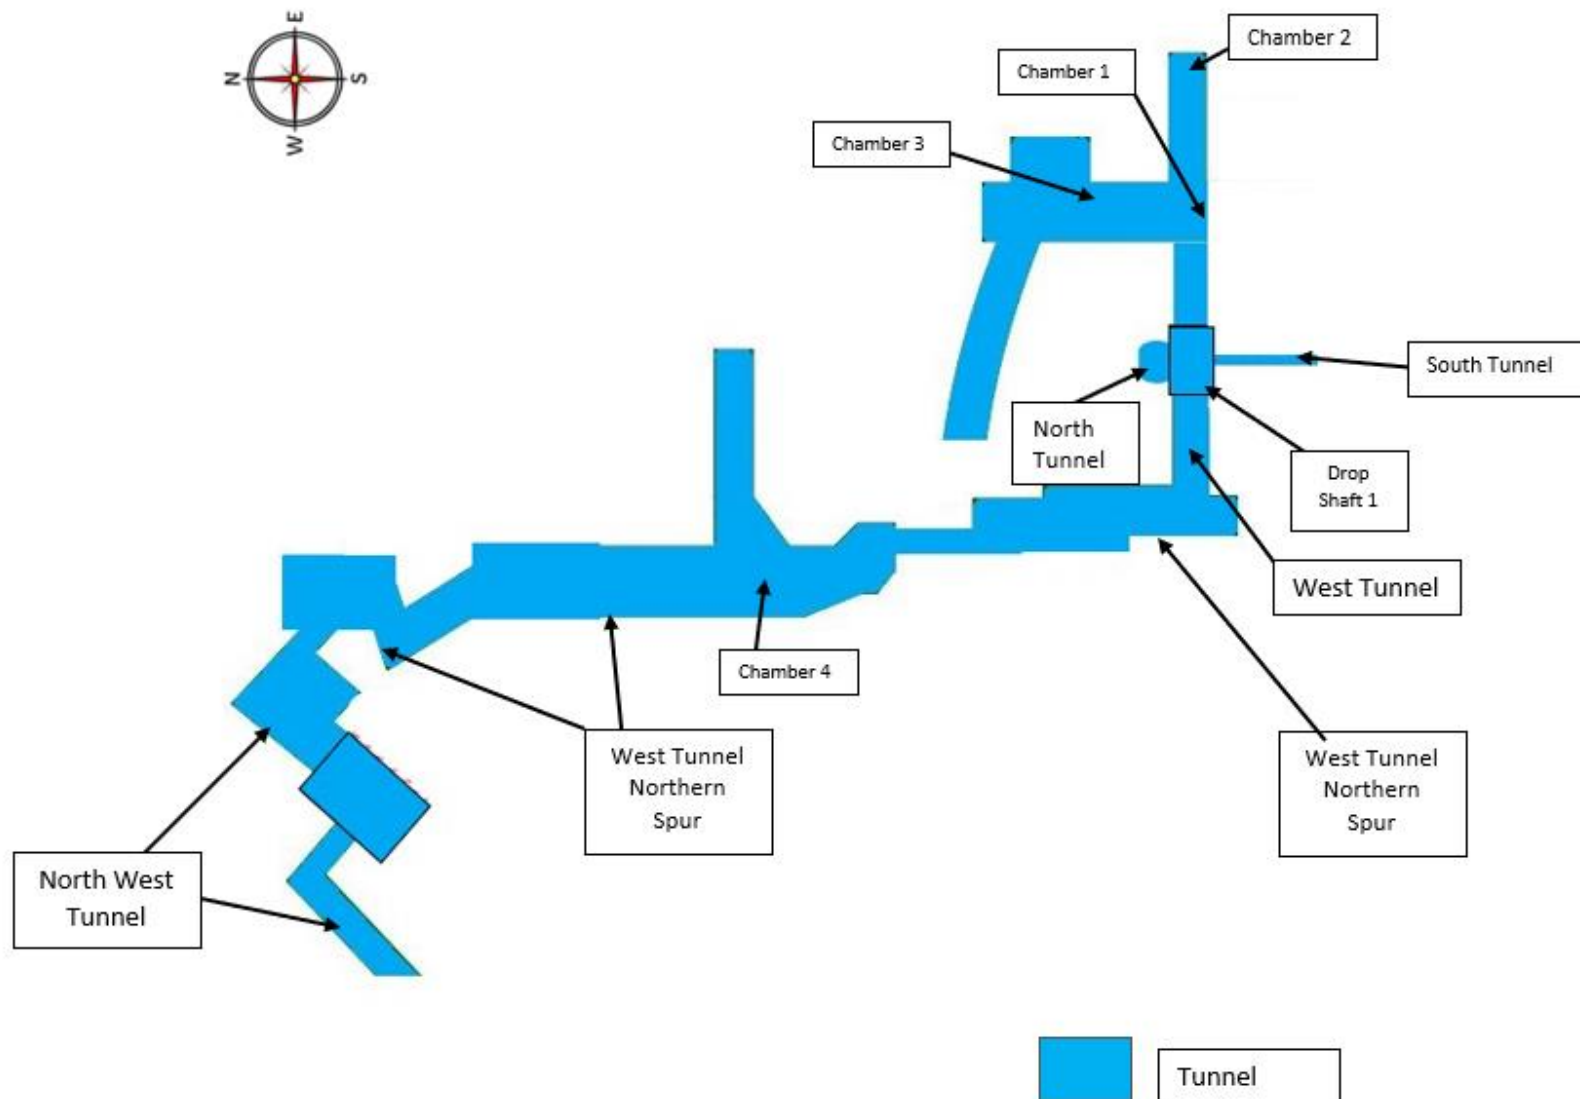

We have seen tunnels more recently in 2017 in Coldharbour in Surrey in a protest against fracking so it's not a massive surprise we are seeing tunnels again.

Tunnelling in particular as a direct action slows down developers and it is expensive to dig out protesters safely.

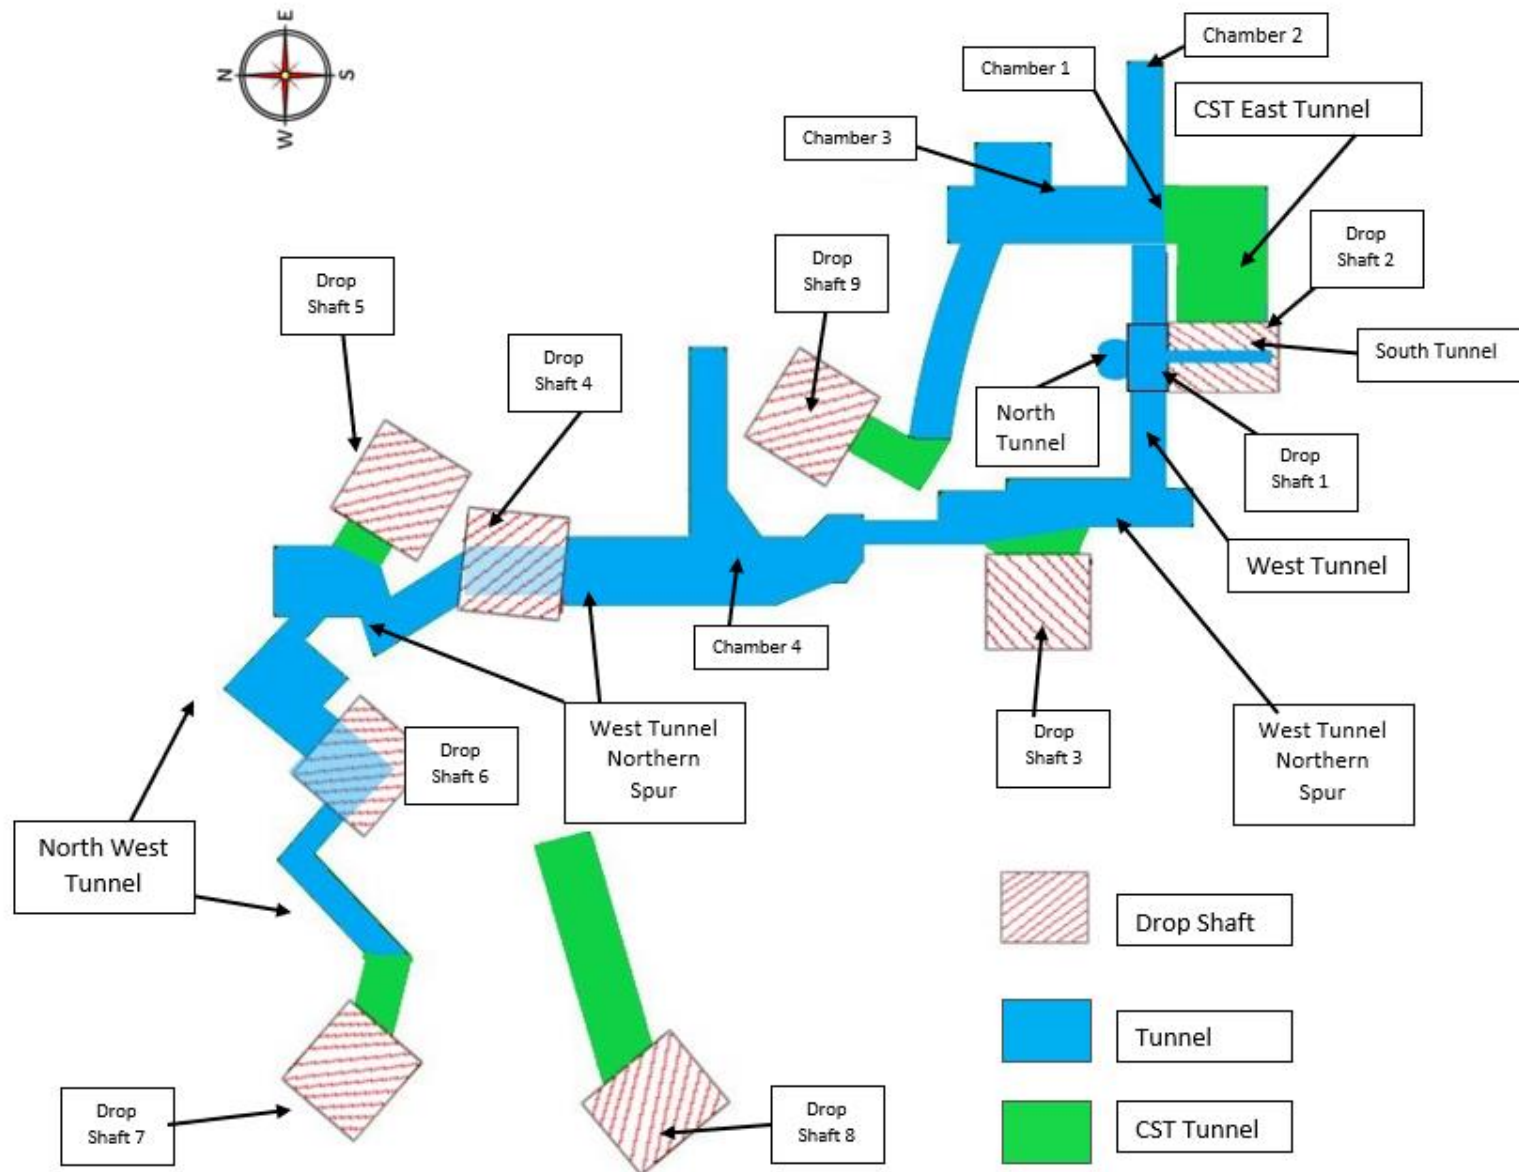

Disco Dave wrote: "That ultimately is the purpose of tunnels and tree houses. To act as a deterrent warning the authorities that should they decide to evict, then it will hurt them where for them it hurts most - in the pocket."

What will be interesting is if these tunnels have the same impact on HS2 as they did on the road-building programme of the late 1990s.

Will it reframe HS2 so it will be seen in the same way as fracking or road building? Or can the argument still be made that it is a low-carbon form of travel even though it does cause some destruction of habitat?
