This guidance gives information on the police registration requirement of part 10 of the Immigration Rules paragraphs 325 and 326.

When to impose the requirement to register

The requirement to register with the police is imposed on an applicant who is a:

- national or citizen of a country or territory listed in Appendix 2 to the rules
- stateless person, or
- person holding a non-national travel document.

And who is given limited leave to:

- enter the UK for longer than six months
- remain allowing them to remain in the UK for longer than six months, starting from the date of their arrival.

For more information on Appendix 2, see related link.

There are certain exceptions to the above. For more information on the rules and exemptions from registration, see link on left: Who needs to register with the police.

The requirement to register can be imposed by:

- an entry clearance officer (ECO)
- a Home Office officer
- a Border Force officer, or
- a caseworker on behalf of the Secretary of State.

The applicant must report to the police within seven days of:

- obtaining the leave (in the UK)
- arriving in the country if imposed by an ECO or Border Force officer
- receiving their biometric residence permits.

For information on where a person must register with the police, see related link: Entry clearance officers and Border Force officers \(before entry and on entry to the UK\).

Once registered, the police will give the applicant a police registration certificate (PRC) which shows they have complied with the requirement to register.

The applicant must inform the police of any changes to the information they have provided whilst they are still in the UK and subject to the requirement to register with the police.

- return the passport to them, enclosing ICD.1100 to explain the endorsement was imposed in error, and
- amend CID, if appropriate to make sure the police are notified of the error.

Removing the requirement - person has registered

If the applicant has registered, you must:

- obtain the police registration certificate and endorse the back page with 'exempt from registration'
- return the certificate and passport to the person, with an ICD.1100 to explain the original endorsement was imposed in error
- write to the Overseas Visitor Records Office (OVRO), if the person lives in London, or the Chief Constable of the relevant police force if they live outside of London, to explain the requirement was imposed in error and request they consider refunding the fee, and
- amend CID to reflect the correct status.

You must consider the requirement to have been imposed in error if a dual national had another nationality not listed in Appendix 2 when they were admitted to the UK.
