Annex A

Managing conflict of interests in the Regulatory Policy Committee

1. Introduction

- 1.1. The Regulatory Policy Committee (RPC) seeks to maintain the highest standards of integrity and reputation in delivering its role. As public office holders, Committee members are expected to act in accordance with The Seven Principles of Public Life (often referred to as the “Nolan principles”), which outline the ethical standards those working in the public sector are expected to adhere to including that Committee members do not benefit personally from their role on the Committee. These underpin the conduct expected of RPC members.
- 1.2. It is important that we do not allow conflicts of interest to occur whether real or perceived. This includes, in particular, avoiding any member being involved in scrutinising an impact assessment for a regulatory proposal where there is any conflict of interest.
- 1.3. The RPC adopts the following approach to managing such conflict of interests.

2. Conflicts of interests

- 2.1. A ‘conflict of interest’ is considered to be any connection or association that is (or might appear to be) likely to influence or have influenced a member’s judgement in committee business, or which might result (or appear to result) in a member (or a member of their family) acquiring a personal benefit or being accused of using their position within the RPC to gain an unfair advantage for or from a third party.
- 2.2. Conflicts of interest are not restricted to financial interests but can include non-financial interests, for example: enhancement of an individual’s career, education, or professional reputation; or access to privileged information or facilities.
- 2.3. The RPC acknowledges that conflicts of interest (and potential conflicts) are sometimes unavoidable. Members are appointed for the skills and experience that they bring to the Committee, and it is important to strike a balance between avoiding conflicts of interest while still allowing them to input on areas where their experience is valuable and appropriate.
- 2.4. Therefore, judgement is sometimes required in assessing whether a member should be excluded from a particular piece of Committee business. We operate a policy of transparency and the principles of openness and integrity apply, and members are required to disclose any real or potential conflicts where they arise.
- 2.5. The action taken to handle any conflict, if required, may take various forms. For example, the member may be excluded from discussions on matters, or contributing to the committee’s outputs on issues on where they are conflicted.

3. Process for identifying conflicts of interests

- 3.1. On appointment, Committee members are required to declare any interests they have which might result in conflicts or be perceived to create conflicts in any area of the Committee's work. Members are provided detailed guidance on managing conflicts of interest, based on Cabinet Office guidelines.
- 3.2. A Register of Interests (ROI) is maintained by the RPC secretariat and published on the website. The ROI is circulated to the Committee ahead of each formal Committee meeting (currently every two months) and a standing item on the agenda prompts members to review their interests and update the ROI as necessary. The ROI is updated immediately on notification of any changes and following each Committee meeting.
- 3.3. A conflict of interest is generally considered to be 'time-expired', 12 months after the committee member's last connection with the third-party concerned. However, this will be considered on its own merit in each individual circumstance.

4. Process for managing conflicts of interests in RPC committee meetings

- 4.1. Should a possible conflict of interest be identified in a committee meeting, the Chair will consider whether the member should participate in the discussion.
- 4.2. The member may then be asked to recuse themselves for that part of the discussion.
- 4.3. However, if the Committee concludes that the member's expertise will be beneficial to the discussion needed, the member will be permitted to participate in the discussions.
- 4.4. In either case, the minutes of the meeting will clearly set out the potential conflict of interest and Committee response to ensure transparency and integrity in the RPC decision making process.

5. Process for managing conflicts of interests in RPC casework

- 5.1. When a case is received by the RPC Secretariat, the member of staff responsible for logging cases checks the subject matter of the case against the ROI to identify any conflicts of interests.
- 5.2. The team within the Secretariat allocated to managing the case will also consider any possible conflicts of interest.
- 5.3. Should a conflict of interest be identified this will be noted on the casework system.
- 5.4. This will then be discussed with the Chair (and where necessary with the member in question) to consider the extent to which the conflicted member should be excluded from working on the case or being involved in any discussions relating to the case (whether as the lead committee member or in commenting on draft opinions prior to issue).

- 5.5. When the opinion is circulated for Committee peer review, the conflicted committee member is excluded from the circulation list and any subsequent discussion.
- 5.6. Should the conflicted member be permitted to work, the Chair and Head of Secretariat will manage and monitor any conflicts to ensure the integrity of the opinion and the RPC.
- 5.7. All opinions in which a member was conflicted and was recused from the whole process will clearly set out at the end of the document:

Committee member [NAME] did not participate in the scrutiny of this case to avoid a potential conflict of interest

- 5.8. This exclusion continues to apply to circulation of the final opinion and remains applicable until the Opinion is published when it goes into the public domain.
- 5.9. Where the Chair agreed that the committee member could work on the case because of the need for their expertise although there may be a perceived conflict of interest, the Committee will manage the process to ensure impartiality and the highest level of integrity to the RPC and the Committee member. This might involve, for example, the member in question being involved in discussion but excluded from decision making on the issue.
- 5.10. In such instances the following statement will be added to the end of the Opinion:

Committee member [NAME] participated in the scrutiny of this case although there was a potential conflict of interest in [STATE CONFLICT AND HANDLING].
