I am personally sick and tired of having to justify why I object to something which has already been thrown out for the reasons put forward for the other plans put together as a whole and now simply broken down in to chunks just so the developer can get their own way on everything "eventually".

Takeley in general has been absolutely saturated with development since we moved here in 2012. We moved in to a village on a protected green, in to a well established cottage that's now been here over 100 years. We weren't looking for new builds, we were looking for peace and tranquility within an area which "when we moved here" was designated as a protected conservation area.

We have enjoyed that for over 10 years albeit blighted by the constant need for greedy developers over the last 2-3 years.

What I love about where I live is its rural aspect, the countryside, the woods, the small streams running around and about. The Flich way down to Hatfield forest, the small woods behind us and seeing deer canter across the green and taking refuge in the early hours in the crop to stay cool and protected. We have many species of wild birds visiting our garden of haven and enjoy the still and quietness of the area we loved back in 2012 as much as now.

Despite several objections and refusals I really don't understand why this keeps coming back and back again causing local residents so much anxiety and stress.

Please for the love of god let this be rejected again and allow our once beautiful field to be laid to crops and let us enjoy watching that crop grow, which dear god we so need in this country right now to become more self sufficient, something which we're wholly capable of if only developers would stop embarking on green field sites and instead develop where the need for development will create homes and jobs for those areas that require it, and that has certainly been overlooked in the south east of the country.
