“total hours of work” are the total hours of work in the pay reference period determined in accordance with Chapters 4 to 7 of Part 6.

23. Payments which fall within regulation 22 form part of a seafarer’s UK additional remuneration where they are—

- (a) only attributable to hours of UK work, and
- (b) would not be paid to the seafarer if the hours of work were not hours of UK work.

Payments which form part of a seafarer’s basic remuneration

24. Payments which fall within regulation 22 which do not form part of a seafarer’s UK additional remuneration form part of a seafarer’s basic remuneration.

Determining the reductions which reduce a seafarer’s basic remuneration

27. In regulation 20 the reductions which reduce the seafarer’s basic remuneration in the pay reference period are determined by the calculation—

$$\text{total reductions} \times (\text{total hours of work} / (\text{total hours of work} + \text{hours of UK work})).$$

Determining the reductions which reduce a seafarer’s UK additional remuneration

28. In regulation 21 the reductions which reduce the seafarer’s UK additional remuneration in the pay reference period are determined by the calculation—

- (a) for salaried hours work, in accordance with Chapter 5;
- (b) for time work, in accordance with Chapter 6;
- (c) for unmeasured work, in accordance with Chapter 7.

Hours spent training

33.—(1) In this Part, references to “training” include hours when the seafarer is—

- (a) attending at a place other than the seafarer’s normal place of work, when the seafarer would otherwise be working, for the purpose of receiving training that has been approved by the employer or operator;
- (b) travelling, when the seafarer would otherwise be working, between a place of work and a place where the seafarer receives such training;
- (c) receiving such training at the seafarer’s normal place of work.

(2) In paragraph (1), hours when the seafarer would “otherwise be working” include any hours when the seafarer is attending at a place or travelling where it is uncertain whether the seafarer would otherwise be working because the seafarer’s hours of work vary either as to their length or in respect of the time at which they are performed.

34. In this Part, references to “travelling” include hours when the seafarer is—

- (a) in the course of a journey by a mode of transport or is making a journey on foot;

CHAPTER 5

Salaried hours work

The meaning of salaried hours work

35.—(1) “Salaried hours work” is work which is done under a seafarer’s contract and which meets the conditions in paragraphs (2) to (5) of this regulation.

(2) The first condition is that the seafarer is entitled under their contract to be paid—

- (a) an annual salary, or
- (b) an annual salary and one or both of—
 - (i) a performance bonus, and
 - (ii) a salary premium.

(3) The second condition is that the seafarer is entitled under their contract to be paid that salary or salary and performance bonus or salary premium (or all three) in respect of their basic hours (as defined in paragraph (8)).

(4) The third condition is that the seafarer is not entitled under their contract to a payment in respect of the basic hours other than—

- (a) an annual salary, or
- (b) an annual salary and one or both of—
 - (i) a performance bonus, and
 - (ii) a salary premium.

(5) The fourth condition is that the seafarer is entitled under their contract to be paid, where practicable and regardless of the number of hours actually worked in a particular week, month or other period, in instalments which—

- (a) are equal and occur not more often than weekly and not less often than monthly, or
- (b) occur monthly and vary but have the result that the seafarer is entitled to be paid an equal amount in each quarter.

(6) Circumstances where it may not be practicable to pay a seafarer by equal instalments, or by and equal amount in each quarter, include where—

- (a) a performance bonus is awarded;
- (b) a salary premium is paid;
- (c) the annual salary is varied;
- (d) a payment is made in respect of hours in addition to basic hours;
- (e) the employment starts or terminates during a week, month or other period provided for in paragraph (5)(a) with the result that the seafarer is paid a proportionate amount of their annual salary for that week, month or other period.

(7) Work may be salaried hours work whether or not—

- (a) all the basic hours are working hours;
- (b) the seafarer works hours in excess of the basic hours (whether the seafarer is entitled to be paid for those excess hours or not);
- (c) the annual salary may be reduced due to an absence from work.

(8) “Basic hours” are a number of hours in a year specified in or ascertained in accordance with a seafarer’s contract.

(9) A “performance bonus” is a payment paid to a seafarer on merit attributable to the quality or amount of work done in the course of more than one pay reference period.

(10) A “salary premium” is—

- (a) an amount of pay which is—
 - (i) in addition to the annual salary;
 - (ii) an increase in the rate of pay for particular working hours,
- (b) in respect of the basic hours, and
- (c) attributable to working—
 - (i) at a particular time of the day;
 - (ii) on a particular day;
 - (iii) at a particular location;
 - (iv) in a particular working environment;
 - (v) within a particular geographical area;
 - (vi) on a particular task;
 - (vii) subject to a particular responsibility.

The meaning of the calculation year

36.—(1) In this Chapter, “the calculation year” has the meaning given in the following paragraphs.

(2) For a seafarer whose annual salary is payable monthly then—

- (a) if the seafarer commenced the employment on the first day of a month, the calculation year is—
 - (i) the year beginning with that day;
 - (ii) in each subsequent year, a year beginning on an anniversary of that day;
 - (b) if the seafarer commenced the employment on any other day of a month, the calculation year is—
 - (i) the period beginning with that day and ending with the day before the first anniversary of the first day of the next month;
 - (ii) in each subsequent year, a year beginning on an anniversary of the first day of that month.
- (3) For a seafarer whose annual salary is payable other than monthly the calculation year is—
- (a) the year beginning with the first day of the employment;
 - (b) in each subsequent year, a year beginning on an anniversary of that day.

Determining the basic hours in the calculation year

37.—(1) In this Chapter, the basic hours in a calculation year are determined in accordance with the following paragraphs.

(2) The basic hours in the calculation year are the basic hours ascertained in accordance with the contract at the start of the calculation year, unless there is a variation to the basic hours which takes effect in the calculation year.

(3) Where a variation to the basic hours takes effect in the calculation year, the basic hours in the calculation year are determined by adding together—

- (a) the proportion of basic hours in the calculation year in the period starting before the day during which the variation takes effect, and
- (b) the proportion of basic hours in the calculation year in the period after the day during which the variation takes effect until the end of the calculation year.

(4) If more than one contractual variation takes effect in the calculation year, the “basic hours in the calculation year” are determined by adding together—

- (a) the proportion of basic hours in the calculation year in the period starting before the day during which the first variation takes effect, and
- (b) for each variation, the proportion of basic hours in the calculation year in the period after the day during which the variation takes effect and before the day during which the next variation takes effect or, in the case of the final variation, the end of the calculation year.

(5) The proportion of basic hours in the calculation year for each of the periods in paragraphs (3) and (4) is calculated using the formula—

$$(D / 365) \times H$$

where—

“D” means the number of days in the period;

“H” means the basic hours in the calculation year which have effect in that period.

Determining hours of salaried hours work in a pay reference period

38.—(1) The hours of salaried hours work in a pay reference period are to be calculated in accordance with the following paragraphs.

(2) Where the pay reference period is a week, the hours of salaried hours work in that period are the basic hours divided by 52.

(3) Where the pay reference period is two weeks, the hours of salaried hours work in that period are the basic hours divided by 26.

(4) Where the pay reference period is four weeks, the hours of salaried hours work in that period are the basic hours divided by 13.

(5) Where the pay reference period is a month, the hours of salaried hours work in that period are the basic hours divided by 12.

(6) Where the pay reference period is any other period, the hours of salaried hours work in that period are the basic hours divided by the figure obtained by dividing 365 by the number of days in the pay reference period.

(7) The basic hours are to be ascertained in accordance with the seafarer's contract on the first day of the pay reference period in question unless paragraphs (8) or (9) apply.

(8) The hours of salaried hours work in a pay reference period are to be ascertained in accordance with regulations 40 to 42 (excess hours) if the seafarer—

- (a) during or before the payment reference period, works hours in excess of the basic hours in the calculation year, and
- (b) is not entitled to be paid more than an annual salary, a performance bonus and a salary premium for those excess hours.

(9) The hours of salaried hours work in a pay reference period are to be determined in accordance with regulation 43 (hours of salaried hours work if employment terminates or contract varied) if—

- (a) the employment terminates before the end of the calculation year, or
- (b) the contract is varied before the end of the calculation year so that it is no longer a contract for salaried hours work.

Absences from work to be reduced from the salaried hours work in a pay reference period

39.—(1) The hours a seafarer is absent from work are to be subtracted from the hours of salaried hours work in a pay reference period if all of the following conditions are met—

- (a) the employer is entitled under the seafarer's contract to reduce the annual salary due to the absence;
- (b) the employer pays the seafarer less than the normal proportion of annual salary in the pay reference period as a result of the absence.

(2) The hours during which a seafarer takes industrial action are to be subtracted from the hours of salaried hours work in a pay reference period if an annual salary was payable for those hours, or would have been payable but for the industrial action.

Determining whether a seafarer works excess hours

40.—(1) For the purposes of this regulation and regulations 38(8) and 42, a seafarer works excess hours if all of the following hours added together exceed the basic hours in a calculation year—

- (a) hours worked which form part of the basic hours in the calculation year;
- (b) hours when the seafarer was absent from work which form part of the basic hours in the calculation year;
- (c) hours worked in the calculation year which do not form part of the basic hours in the calculation year in respect of which the seafarer had no entitlement under their contract to a payment other than annual salary or annual salary and a performance bonus or salary premium (or all three);
- (d) hours treated as worked in accordance with regulation 41 to the extent that such hours consist of hours in respect of which the seafarer had no entitlement under their contract to a payment other than annual salary or annual salary and a performance bonus or salary premium (or all three).

(2) Hours during which the seafarer was taking part in industrial action are not to be included in sub-paragraph (a) to (d).

(3) In this Chapter “excess hours” means hours worked in excess of the basic hours in the calculation year.

Hours treated as worked for the purpose of determining whether a seafarer works excess hours

41.—(1) The hours listed in sub-paragraphs (a) to (c) are treated as worked for the purposes of determining whether the seafarer works excess (in accordance with regulation 40(1)(d)) and, where the seafarer works excess hours, the number of hours of salaried hours work in that year (in accordance with regulation 42)—

- (a) hours a seafarer spends training when the seafarer would otherwise be working;
- (b) hours a seafarer is available at or near a place of work for the purposes of working, unless the seafarer is at home;
- (c) hours a seafarer spends travelling for the purposes of working, when the seafarer would otherwise be working, unless the travelling is between—
 - (i) the seafarer’s home, or a place where the seafarer is temporarily residing other than for the purposes of working, and
 - (ii) a place of work or a place where an assignment is carried out.

(2) In paragraph (1)(b), hours when a seafarer is available only includes hours when the seafarer is awake for the purposes of working, even if a seafarer is required to sleep at or near a place of work and the employer or operator provides suitable facilities for sleeping.

(3) In paragraph (1)(c), hours treated as hours when the seafarer would otherwise be working include—

- (a) hours when the seafarer is travelling for the purpose of carrying out assignments to be carried out at different places between which the seafarer is obliged to travel, and which are not places occupied by the employer or operator;
- (b) hours when the seafarer is travelling where it is uncertain whether the seafarer would otherwise be working because the seafarer’s hours of work vary either as to their length or in respect of the time at which they are performed.

Determining hours of salaried hours work if a seafarer works excess hours

42.—(1) Paragraph (2) applies to the first pay reference period in a calculation year during which—

- (a) a seafarer has, during the calculation year to date, worked all of their basic hours for that calculation year, and
- (b) begins to work excess hours.

(2) Where this paragraph applies, the hours of salaried hours work in the pay reference period are calculated by adding together all of the following hours—

- (a) the proportion of basic hours attributable to the part of the pay reference period starting before the day during which the seafarer worked excess hours;
- (b) the proportion of basic hours attributable to the part of the pay reference period starting on the day during which the seafarer worked excess hours;
- (c) the number of hours actually worked in the pay reference period starting on the day during which the seafarer worked excess hours;
- (d) the number of hours treated as worked, in accordance with regulation 41, in the pay reference period starting on the day during which the seafarer worked excess hours.

(3) In paragraph (2)(a) and (b), each proportion of basic hours in the pay reference period is calculated using the formula—

$$(D/365) \times H$$

where—

“D” means the number of days in the part of the pay reference period referred to in paragraph (2)(a) or (b);

“H” means the basic hours in the calculation year.

(4) Reductions from the basic hours in the calculation year for absences, in accordance with regulation 39 (absences from work), must only be made from the proportion of basic hours determined under paragraph (2)(a).

(5) For each pay reference period in the calculation year after the pay reference period referred to in paragraph (1), the number of hours of salaried hours work are calculated by adding together all of the following hours—

- (a) the number of hours of salaried hours work in the pay reference period determined in accordance with regulation 38(2) to (6) (determining hours of salaried hours work);
- (b) the number of hours actually worked in the pay reference period;
- (c) the number of hours treated as worked in the pay reference period in accordance with regulation 41.

(6) Regulation 39 (absences from work) does not apply to the calculation in paragraph (5)(a).

Hours of salaried hours work if the employment terminates or contract is varied 43.—(1) Where the employment terminates before the end of a calculation year the hours of salaried hours work in the final pay reference period are calculated in accordance with the following paragraphs.

(2) Where the seafarer does not work excess hours, the hours of salaried hours work in the final pay reference period are the sum of the following—

- (a) the number of hours of salaried hours work in the pay reference period calculated in accordance with regulation 38(2) to (6) (determining hours of salaried hours work), and
- (b) the number of hours (if any) by which A exceeds B where—

“A” is the number of hours determined in accordance with regulation 41, and

“B” is the total of the number of hours of salaried hours work determined in accordance with regulation 38(2) to (6) in respect of all pay reference periods (including the final pay reference period) since the beginning of the calculation year.

(3) Where the seafarer works excess hours, the hours of salaried hours work in the final pay reference period are the sum of the following—

- (a) the number of hours determined in accordance with regulation 42, and
- (b) the number of hours of salaried hours work calculated in accordance with regulation 38(2) to (6) for the period beginning on the day following the last day of the final pay reference period and ending at the end of the calculation year as if—
 - (i) it was a single pay reference period (containing that number of days), and
 - (ii) the seafarer had remained employed until the end of the calculation year without any absences.

(4) If a contract for salaried hours work is varied with the effect that it is no longer a contract for salaried hours work, this regulation is to apply as if the employment of the seafarer had been terminated and the last day of the seafarer’s final pay reference period had fallen on the day before the day on which the variation took effect.

CHAPTER 6

EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Regulations)

These Regulations implement the Seafarers' Wages Act 2023 (c. 8) which makes provision in relation to the remuneration of seafarers who do not qualify for the national minimum wage.

The Act requires harbour authorities to ask the operator of a service which enters a UK harbour 120 times or more in a relevant year for a national minimum wage equivalence declaration ("declaration"). The declaration is that seafarers on the service who do not qualify for the UK national minimum wage ("NMW") are being paid at least an equivalent rate to the UK NMW while working in the UK or its territorial waters. The Act requires that harbour authorities must impose surcharges when operators fail to provide a declaration or where they operate a service inconsistently with a declaration. Subject to certain exceptions, the Act requires harbour authorities to refuse ships providing a service access to their harbour if they impose a surcharge and it is not paid.

The date on which the relevant year begins is provided in regulation 3.

Part 2 sets out the procedural requirements for harbour authorities to carry out their duties under the Act. Regulation 5 sets out the periods within which harbour authorities must request, and operators provide, declarations, and other procedural requirements for declarations.

Regulation 6 makes provision as to the period within which harbour authorities must notify operators about surcharges which have been imposed and the manner and form of that notification. It requires harbour authorities to provide copies of notifications of surcharges to the Secretary of State and regulation 9 requires the Secretary of State to publish information on surcharges which have been imposed. Regulation 7 provides that surcharges must be imposed according to the tariff prescribed in Schedule 2. Regulation 8 provides for the period within which surcharges must be paid and regulation 10 sets out the time limits for making objections to surcharges to the Secretary of State.

Where a surcharge is not paid harbour authorities must inform the Secretary of State (regulation 11) and regulation 12 makes provision for the communication of refusal of access.

Part 3 makes provision for the hourly rates of the NMW equivalent.

Regulation 13 defines the concept of a pay reference period. Regulation 16 sets out how to determine whether the apprenticeship rate applies to a seafarer.

Part 4 sets out the calculations to determine whether the NMW equivalent has been paid. Regulation 17 provides that the basic rate is added to the additional rate to determine the hourly rate at which the seafarer is treated as remunerated. If the hourly rate is less than the applicable rate of the NMW equivalent in the pay reference period, the seafarer has not been paid the NMW equivalent. Regulation 18 provides that the basic rate is determined by dividing the basic remuneration in the pay reference period by the total hours of work in the pay reference period. Regulation 19 provides that the additional rate is determined by dividing the additional remuneration in the pay reference period by the hours of UK work in the pay reference period.

Chapter 1 of Part 5 sets out how to determine the basic and additional remuneration for the purposes of the calculations in Part 4. The payments paid by the employer to the seafarer as respects the pay reference period, which form part of the basic and additional remuneration, are set out in Chapter 2. Regulation 24 provides which payments form part of a seafarer's basic remuneration and regulation 23 which form part of additional remuneration. The reductions which are to be subtracted from the payments to determine the basic and additional remuneration are set out in Chapter 3. Regulations 26 to 28 provide for the apportionment of reductions between basic and additional remuneration. Regulations 29 and 30 set out the circumstances in which deductions or payments for the employer's or operator's own use and benefit, deductions or payments as respects a seafarer's expenditure, and deductions or payments as respects living accommodation are to be treated as reductions.

Part 6 sets out how to determine the hours of work for the purposes of the calculations in Part 4. The hours of work for determining the basic rate are the hours of salaried hours work (Chapter 5), time work (Chapter 6), or unmeasured work (Chapter 7) worked or treated as worked by the seafarer in the pay reference period. Chapter 8 sets out how to determine the hours of UK work in a pay reference period for the purpose of determining the additional rate in Part 4.
