3. Nature of the Cooperation

- 3.1 In the implementation of operational cooperation, the Sides respect their human rights obligations and legal principles, in particular those related to access to international protection and the principle of non-refoulement. The Sides, in particular, ensure that the rights of all persons, especially those in need of international protection, unaccompanied minors, victims of trafficking in human beings and other vulnerable persons, are fully respected during all joint activities.
- 3.2 The cooperation between the Sides should be carried out in accordance with the provisions of this working arrangement, and, insofar as relevant and appropriate, taking into account the United Kingdom's status as a third country, the European Union acquis and the legal framework governing the Agency, and within the framework of the European Union's external action policy and in accordance with the legal framework of the United Kingdom.

Information Exchange

- 3.3 The Sides may share information and analytical products in order to improve common situational awareness, cooperation during operational activities and joint risk analyses for the purpose of integrated border management in line with the Sides' respective mandates and legal obligations. To that end, the Sides may establish special arrangements regulating the exchange of information, where applicable in line with the provisions of Annex 1.

Such cooperation may also include the provision of joint support to other third countries, subject to consent by the other third countries concerned.
- 3.6 The Sides may exchange good practices and carry out joint activities and tailored trainings to that end, including in the areas of research and innovation, return, readmission and reintegration, information exchange, information systems, document fraud, quality control for border management (including vulnerability assessments), capability development (including for investigative purposes), identification of persons of interest, human rights, identification and referral of vulnerable persons as well as other areas of common interest, including via relevant working groups and collaboration between the Sides' liaison networks, where appropriate.

- 3.7 The Sides may invite each other's representatives to participate in projects and activities of common interest, including in technology innovation pilot projects, technology demonstrations or tests.
- 3.8 The Sides, in cooperation with the relevant authorities of the European Union Member States, and in synergy with other actions, programmes and instruments implemented with the support of the European Union, may develop initiatives and implement technical and operational assistance projects to enhance capacities – including those of third countries – in the area of integrated border management (including by enhancing its capacity to prevent and combat illegal migration and cross-border crime) and in the area of return to other third countries.

Operational response

- 3.9 The Agency may deploy its staff and members of the teams from the European Border and Coast Guard standing corps to participate, without executive powers, in operational activities on the territory of the United Kingdom, as defined in the specific operational plans agreed between the Sides. Subject to the consent of the European Union Member State concerned and under the command and control of that European Union Member State, the operational cooperation referred to above may include the deployment of staff and equipment by the relevant authorities of the United Kingdom to participate, without executive powers, in Agency-coordinated operational activities on the territory of European Union Member States.
- 3.11 At the request of the relevant authorities of the United Kingdom, the Agency may use the United Kingdom's seaports and airports for implementing operational cooperation with maritime and aerial assets as defined in the respective operational plan agreed with the relevant authorities of the United Kingdom. At the request of the relevant European Union Member State, the Agency may support and facilitate the cooperation between the relevant authorities of the United Kingdom and the relevant European Union Member

State regarding the use of seaports and airports of the European Union Member State concerned and in relation to the operational cooperation referred to in paragraph 3.10.

Return and readmission

- 3.12 The Sides may exchange best practices and expertise, and cooperate on capacity building and mutually facilitate such cooperation with other third countries in the area of return, readmission and reintegration to those third countries, in line with, in so far as relevant and appropriate, existing European Union and United Kingdom policy and legislation, for the effective implementation of return-related activities and in respect of human rights and international obligations. This includes, inter alia, exchange of best practices, expertise and cooperation on capacity building in all stages of the return process, including the voluntary and non-voluntary return of persons present without authorisation in the territory of a European Union Member State or of the United Kingdom and subject to return to other third countries, the identification and documentation of third country nationals subject to return procedures and reintegration assistance.
- 3.13 The Sides may share information relevant for the return systems of the United Kingdom and the European Union Member States, in accordance with paragraphs 5 to 8 and 10 of this working arrangement, including where appropriate, via relevant working groups.

- 3.17 The Sides should decide on detailed rules on their participation as observers, which should be reflected in the activity or operation's implementation or operational plan, including on information exchange and cooperation during their participation, as applicable. Those modalities should, insofar as relevant and appropriate, taking account of the United Kingdom's status as a third country, be in full compliance with the applicable legal frameworks, in particular those related to human rights and data protection.
