About the Care Quality Commission

The Care Quality Commission

checks the standard of health and social care services in England. They are called CQC for short.

Most organisations who give people health or social care must be on CQC's list called a register. CQC maintains this register to make sure the care people receive is safe. This is the law.

This means places like:

- hospitals
- GP surgeries
- dentists
- care homes
- care in people's own homes.

What CQC does

CQC checks every organisation on its list to see that people are getting care which is:

- safe
- respectful
- well run.

CQC does this by:

- collecting information
- visiting
- writing reports.

What this consultation is about

A consultation is when we ask questions to find out what people think of a change.

This consultation is about 3 changes:

1. Replacing the end date of the regulations with a review date
2. Healthcare at sports events and cultural events if someone gets hurt
3. Reporting when someone with a learning disability is restrained

Restrained means you are held by force. This can be physical or happen in other ways.

Telling us what you think

This booklet includes information about the changes.

You can tell us what you think by filling out the online questionnaire:

Reviewing regulations

We use a set of rules, called regulations. Registered health and care organisations must follow these rules.

The rules are due to expire. Their end date is in March 2025.

We want to review the regulations every 5 years instead of having an end date.

We will ask you some questions about what you think about this change.

Questions about changing the rules date

Do you think we should review our rules every 5 years instead of having an end date?

- Yes
- No
- I'm not sure

Or are there any other choices?
For example, you can: (put a tick in the box that suits you best)

Make the end date longer by 3 years

Healthcare at sports and cultural events

Some organisations give healthcare to people at sports venues and sports and cultural events.

These organisations help people who have hurt themselves or are ill at sports venues, sports events and cultural events, such as carnivals.

These could be at regular events like football matches, or temporary ones such as a music festival.

But poor care has led to injuries, illness, abuse and even death at sporting events.

What happens now

Care providers at sporting events do not have to register with CQC.

They do not have to follow the rules and CQC does not check that care is safe.

Healthcare at sports and cultural events

We want organisations who give people care at sporting events to be regulated.

This means they will have to register with CQC.

They will have to follow the rules.

They will be fully checked for safety. CQC will publish reports about the quality of their care.

What restraint is

Restraint should only ever be used to keep a person or other people safe. Only when everything else has been tried. It should not be used often.

Restraint can mean:

- physically holding someone to stop them moving
- giving them medication to calm them down
- keeping them apart from other people – this is called being segregated.

Reporting restraint

This is for all people, not only people with learning disabilities and autistic people.

Why do we want to make this change? - we want CQC to be told when someone is being restrained or segregated in a mental health hospital.

This is so CQC can take action quickly to protect the person and other people being restrained too much or for the wrong reasons.

We want all restraint and segregation to be reported to CQC within 72 hours.

Treating everyone in a good and fair way

We want to treat everyone in a good and fair way.

We don't think these changes will harm anyone because of their:

- disability
- sex
- gender change
- age
- sexual orientation
- religion or belief
- race
- pregnancy or maternity
- marriage or civil partnership

We think the changes will make everyone safer.
