

How to know if you are a producer under Tobacco and Related Product Regulation (TRPR)

Under TRPR a producer is liable for the products supplied in the United Kingdom. If you are not submitter of notifications or manufacturer of the product it is still essential that you understand your responsibilities as a producer. This information is provided as a starting point. If you are unsure, you must seek independent legal advice or contact your local trading standards authority. It is essential to make yourself aware of any Vaping related legislation and their associated obligations within the UK.

Manufacturer

If you are a manufacturer based in the UK you are the producer of that product

Re-brander / White label

If you are supplying a white label product you will be considered a producer of that product under UK law

Importer

Regardless of the notified status of a Vaping product, importers of products made outside of the UK can be liable as a producer under TRPR

Retailer

In most cases, retailers are not considered to be producers. This will not be the case if you are the importer of the product or supply a white label product under your own brand

As a producer you are responsible for:

- Safety and quality of the product
- Vigilance standards
- Accuracy of leaflets and labelling
- Offences relating to the supply of the product
- Ensuring that any notification relating to your products are accurate
