Do you agree with the CMA's proposal of adopting new rules and guidance for water redetermination references? Please provide reasons for your answer.

No - we agree with most except for the approach to provisional redeterminations. We disagree that there may be cases where the CMA considers that it is not appropriate to issue a provisional determination. The value of the redetermination process is that it provides an independent view of what are critical issues for infrastructure in the UK. Watering down this route sends a signal to investors that there may be no independent process - which will clearly have implications for investment in the UK.
