Subject: Change to PMRV launch plan

Dear All,

We are providing an update on the development of the “PMRV” system, which will replace the current ETSWAP system. In June 2022, we asked stationary operators to be ready to access the new system from October 2022. Aircraft operators were planned as part of a second phase in 2023. Thank you for your help in preparing for this change.

Unfortunately, access will not commence from October 2022, as originally outlined. All operators must continue to use ETSWAP for their compliance activities, including submission of permit variations, notifications, and 2022 annual emission reports, until further notified. You do not need to take any further action to continue to use ETSWAP.

The project, has recently passed a Government Digital Service Beta Assessment which is a pre-requisite for the system going live on GOV.UK. This is an important milestone and we very much appreciate the invaluable support operators and verifiers have provided by taking part in user testing of the service. However, some areas of development remain in progress so we are reconsidering how best to launch the new service. We want to ensure that operators have the smoothest possible transition and, in this case, have enough time to prepare for the 2022 compliance deadlines.

We understand that this delay may be disappointing. Please be assured that any work you have done to date to prepare for the transition is still valid. Responses to the survey sent out in August will still be used to prepare for onboarding and data that operators have already downloaded for archiving purposes will not need to be downloaded again. Once we have a revised launch plan we will let you know the details, ensuring there is sufficient time to transition to the new system. This will include time to download any remaining data on the ETSWAP system.

Please contact us at PMRV@BEIS.gov.uk with any questions on the new service. For any queries on ETSWAP and the 2022 compliance approach, please contact your regulator.
