Introduction

Malaysia consists of two main regions: Peninsular Malaysia (West Malaysia) and Malaysian Borneo (East Malaysia)<sup>5</sup>, which includes the states of Sabah and Sarawak as well as the federal territory of Labuan. Malaysia is a federation of partially self-governing states and territories under a central government. It comprises 13 states (Malay: negeri) and three federal territories (Malay: wilayah persekutuan). Historically, British Malaya was the name for the group of states on the Malay Peninsula and the island of Singapore that were under British control during the 18th to 20th centuries. The Federation of Malaya was established in 1948 and became an independent nation on 31st August 1957. In 1963, Malaysia was formed through the union of the Singapore, North Borneo (now Sabah) and Sarawak Crown Colonies. Singapore later separated from Malaysia to become an independent state on 9 August 1965<sup>6</sup>.

Geographical names policy

Geographical names should be taken as found on official Malaysian-produced Roman-script sources. The main sources for geographical names are topographic maps published by the Department of Survey and Mapping of Malaysia (JUPEM)<sup>7</sup>. The Malaysian National Committee on Geographical <sup>1</sup> It is called Bahasa Malaysia ("Malaysian language") or Bahasa Melayu ("Malay language") in Malay. Language codes given in this Factfile are ISO-639 codes.

<sup>2</sup> Historically, Malay has been written using various scripts. The modified Arabic script Jawi is used to write Malay for religious, cultural and some administrative purposes but has largely been replaced by the Roman script.

<sup>3</sup> Due to congestion in Kuala Lumpur, the seat of government was moved to the new city of Putrajaya in 1999 (construction began about 25km south of Kuala Lumpur in 1995). Kuala Lumpur remains the country's capital, the seat of the King and Parliament and the principal financial and commercial centre, while Putrajaya functions as the administrative seat of the federal government.

<sup>5</sup> The term "Peninsular Malaysia" is the official and widely used name for the part of Malaysia on the Malay Peninsula. While "East Malaysia" and "West Malaysia" are sometimes used informally, official references typically distinguish between Peninsular Malaysia and Sabah, Sarawak and Labuan to avoid any implication that Malaysia consists of two separate countries.

Names (MNCGN) is responsible for geographical naming activities in Malaysia. They maintain the Malaysian Geographic Names and Web Gazetteer Application (MyGeoName)<sup>8</sup>. It stores authoritative Roman-script geographical names and their locations across the country.

Languages

Malaysia's official language is Malay (Bahasa Malaysia)<sup>9</sup>, a standardised form of the Malay language, but English is an active second language, serving as the language for business and instruction in many schools. Malaysia has over 130 minority languages, including Iban, Chinese (including Cantonese, Mandarin and Hokkien), Tamil and Thai<sup>10</sup>. A cultural pact in 1972 between Malaysia and Indonesia led to a common Roman-script spelling system for the two countries.

Administrative structure

At first-order administrative level (ADM1), Malaysia is divided into 13 states<sup>11</sup> (Malay: negeri) and three federal territories (Malay: wilayah persekutuan)<sup>12</sup>. Peninsular Malaysia comprises 11 states and two federal territories: Kuala Lumpur and Putrajaya. Malaysian Borneo consists of two states, Sabah and Sarawak and one federal territory, Labuan. The federal government has direct administration of the federal territories. Governance of the states is divided between the federal and the state governments with 9 of the 13 states retaining their royal families.

At second-order (ADM2) level, the states in Peninsular Malaysia are subdivided into districts (Malay: daerah or jajahan) and further subdivided into sub-districts (Malay: mukim). In East Malaysia, the states of Sabah and Sarawak are split into divisions (Malay: bahagian) and further subdivided into districts (Malay: daerah). The federal territories are structured differently, being divided into districts, administrative villages (Malay: kampong) or precincts (Malay: presint). Details of Malaysia's ADM1s are listed on the next page.

<sup>15</sup> Sometimes seen as Malacca, Settlement of Malacca, State of Melaka. Note that the conventional English name, Strait of Malacca, should be used for the stretch of water between Peninsular Malaysia and the Indonesian island of Sumatra since it is an international feature.

<sup>16</sup> The honorific name of Perlis was Indera Kayangan until 2015, when the Raja of Perlis decreed that the state would be known simply as Perlis.

<sup>17</sup> Klang was the state capital of Selangor before it moved to Kuala Lumpur and then Shah Alam.
