Introduction

Department for Work &
Pensions

Pension Credit is a benefit from the Department for Work and Pensions.

Pension Credit gives extra money to people who have reached State Pension Age and who have a low income.

This information tells you who can get Pension Credit and how to apply.

About Pensions

A pension is money to live on when you do not have a wage or an income from working.

Most people get a pension when they retire.

You retire when you leave your job and stop working.

You can retire when you reach a certain age, or due to poor health.

There are 3 types of pension:

- Private pension
- Workplace pension
- State Pension.

A private pension is money you have saved or invested for when you retire.

A workplace pension is money paid into a pension by your employer.

You may pay into a workplace pension too, from your wage.

A State Pension is money you may be able to get from the government.

If you can get it, the Department for Work and Pensions pay this money to you.

After you have sent the form to us

When you apply we will look at how much income you already get.

Income can be:

- Money you get from benefits
- Money you get from pensions
- Money you have earned or saved.

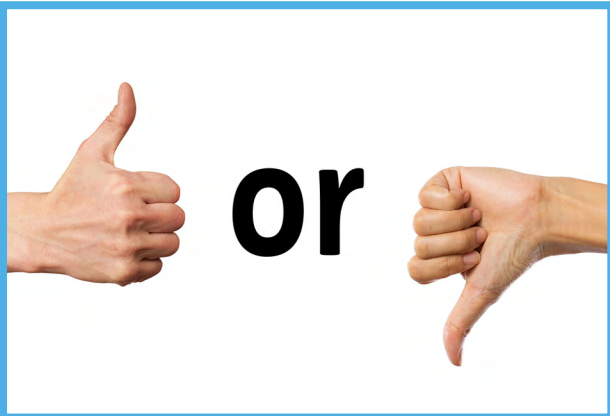

We also look at:

- Savings or investments over £10,000
- If you are a couple, how much money and savings you both have.

You might get more money if you:

- Are the main carer of a child, a young person, or a disabled person
- Are severely disabled
- Have certain housing costs.

When you apply we will let you know if you can or cannot get Pension Credit.

You must have a bank or building society account.

This is where we will pay your money.
