Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing to make a formal representation regarding this application.

I want to be absolutely clear: I do not believe the current situation is acceptable, and I do not believe the concerns of women and girls are being taken seriously enough.

I now feel frightened to walk outside my own home alone. More importantly, [redacted]

I am expected to simply accept this situation and send my [redacted] out into the community, while knowing that there are serious concerns about the men involved.

So I ask you directly: Can you genuinely assure me that [redacted] will be safe? Can you assure me that she will not be sexually assaulted, raped, seriously harmed or killed?

Of course you cannot give me that assurance. And that is precisely why I am so angry and frightened.

Women and girls should not have to change their lives, restrict where they go, avoid walking alone or live in fear because of the actions or potential actions of men. We should not be expected to simply accept this as the price of living in our own communities.

I am asking those responsible to stop treating this as a matter of paperwork and procedure and start recognising the very real fear and anxiety being experienced by women and families.

Please listen to the people who are directly affected. Please take action before somebody is seriously harmed.

People are frightened, angry and reaching the end of their patience. There needs to be a serious and meaningful response, not simply more waiting, reassurances or bureaucratic processes.

I urge you to consider the safety of women and girls as an absolute priority and to take meaningful action now, rather than waiting until something terrible happens.

We deserve to feel safe in our own homes, our own streets and our own communities.

Yours faithfully,
